Rebels Sink Freighter Bearing U. S. Munitions To Madrid Government

Crew of Mar Cantabrico Saved; Vessel Goes Down in Flames.

$2,700,000 Cargo Shipped at N. Y.

Spanish Boat Cleared Before Neutrality Act Was Signed.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 8.—The Spanish government freighter Mar Cantabrico, which raced out of New York January 6 just ahead of Congressional action to prevent her munitions cargo from reaching the Spanish civil war, met her doom today with her goal almost in sight.

In the Bay of Biscay she encountered the Spanish insurgent cruiser Carnarias, unit of the blockade attempting to prevent her from delivering her load of American-made planes and other war supplies to the Socialist government.

Under bombardment of the cruiser's guns the Mar Cantabrico went down in flames in the bay about 90 miles off the Spanish coast.

First Believed British Ship.

A brief, matter-of-fact report from the British destroyer Echo reached the London admiralty tonight to solve a mystery that had puzzled Europe for more than six hours. First reports indicated the vessel that had gone down was a British liner homebound from Africa.

The Echo's skipper reported:

"I have been in communication with the Spanish cruiser Canarias, which states that the Spanish ship Mar Cantabrico was sunk. Her crew are aboard the Canarias."

The message was taken to mean all the crew had been saved.

(The Mar Cantabrico, 6,632 tons, carried a crew of 40 men under Capt. Jose Santa Maria when she sailed from Brooklyn January 6 for Vera Cruz, Mexico.)

(Her cargo at that time was estimated to be worth $2,700,000. She picked up more munitions at Vera Cruz.)

Cargo Possibly Unloaded.

The mystery ship, which carried from New York war supplies shipped by Robert Cuse, New Jersey arms broker, provided one more mystery before plunging into the Bay of Biscay.

It still was unknown whether any part of her cargo was unloaded for the Spanish leftist forces before her destruction.

When she sailed from Vera Cruz February 19 her announced destination was Barcelona. Maritime circles here, however, said later she had been instructed to land her cargo at Bilbao, on Spain's northern coast.

It was feared she would be unable to run the insurgent blockade concentrated near the straits of Gibraltar. It was reported insurgent warships were especially alert to intercept her.

It was not known here whether the Mar Cantabrico had been able to reach Barcelona or an other Spanish port, but shipping authorities believed she had been hanging off the Spanish coast for days looking for a chance to sneak past the insurgent warships.

Took on More Supplies.

She was 17 days out of Vera Cruz, where she was known to have loaded two more American-made warplanes and other supplies in addition to what she carried from New York.

Four British destroyers, the Echo, Eclipse, Encounter and Escapade, which had raced out into the Bay of Biscay when the first SOS came in the call letters of a British liner, returned to their bases tonight.

The confusion over the doomed ship's identity was apparently due to the fact that the Elder-Dempster liner Aba, homebound from West Africa to Liverpool, had sighted the flaming Mar Cantabrico and sent out the S O S under her own call letters, informing all the Eastern Atlantic that some ship was "bombarded, burning and sinking" in the Bay of Biscay.

For a time it was feared that the Aba's sister liner, the Adda, had been sunk but her owners located

House of Morgan Is Barred From Floating French Loan

Robinson Announces Morgenthau's Reply to Paris Query; Borah Assails Buying Bonds Abroad as 'Conspiracy.'

By Sidney Olson.

The United States Treasury has refused France permission to float in part its impending "unlimited defense loan" in this country through such a banking agent as J. P. Morgan & Co.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, the majority leader, made the announcement yesterday in conjunction with Secretary of the Treasury Henry L. Morgenthau, and other Congressional leaders, by reading a query from the French government and the Secretary's answer.

Secretary Morgenthau has been disturbed by a storm of critical Congressional comment over the suggestion that English, French and American bankers and Government leaders were studying means to enable American banks and investors to absorb a part of the $1,000,000,000 French defense loan.

The Johnson act prohibits flotation of the securities of any defaulting war debtor country in this country.

It was believed Americans would find a way around the law by buying the bonds in France.

Morgenthau during the day repeated his Friday conference with Ambassador Bonnet, of France, and V. A. L. Mallett, counselor of the British Embassy.

Sunday night Senator William E. Borah (Republican), Idaho, termed the scheme "a miserable evasion of the law." Yesterday, in a brief but pungent speech in the Senate, he pointed out "the risk of such a conspiracy," and added:

"I think it is a rather dangerous road that these bankers are pointing out to the investors of the United States in trying to purchase this so-called defense loan, which is a war loan and nothing less."

The French query, to sound out American official opinion, according to Senator Robinson, was "sent from Paris at 8 p. m., March 5. At 3:45 p. m., on Saturday, March 6, the Secretary of the Treasury delivered to the French Ambassador for transmission" the American reply.

The French question:

Would the United States authorities have any objection if the French government name some bank of firm in New York, such as J. P. Morgan & Co., to act as the agent in the United States for the purpose of paying coupons of the proposed loan in cases where payment is requested in dollars.

The American answer:

While the Treasury cannot, of course, express either its disapproval of the proposal of the French government to issue a

Hurja Retires As Democratic Political Head

National Committee Chief Will Resign Within Sixty Days.

Emil Hurja, vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee, will resign within 60 days to accept a position with a New York financial institution, he announced last night.

His retirement from active political life is the latest step in a colorful career which embraces a pilgrimage aboard the Ford peace ship to Europe during World War days, pioneering in Alaska service in Wall Street and, finally, a rocketing success as the right-hand man of James A. Farley.

No Political Ambitions.

Intimating he will remain out of the political campaigns of 1938 and 1940, Hurja said he had decided to resign because he can earn more money in private life and must "begin thinking of the future." He also said he is not in the market for "any political appointment," when it was recalled he has been mentioned as possible American Minister to Finland. He also was mentioned for this post after the first Roosevelt victory.

A statistical entrepeneur, whose system of election analysis has come to be regarded as political wizardry by followers of the national scene here. Hurja worked through the 1932 Presidential campaign without pay.

Race Services Here Continue Despite Raids

Garnett Threatens to Bar 'Telecast;' Prisoners Plead Not Guilty.

The racetrack information service, known as National Telecast, Inc., was carrying on business as usual all day yesterday despite a raid Saturday and threats of District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett to ban Telecast from the air "whether their business is lawful or unlawful."

In a day replete with activity in the war between Telecast and its giant national rival, "Teleflash," the following new developments became known:

Police raided two alleged bookmaking joints. Senator King declined to push a probe of District gambling. Attorney William B. O'Connell for "Jewboy" Dietz said he would welcome a complete investigation of all American race services. Dietz and his partner, two telephone company employes, and several others pleaded not guilty when arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham Turnage.

Six Men Released.

Because the District Attorney's office "won't give us papers in these cases," vice squad police were forced to release six men arrested yesterday in gaming raids. The first place raided contained a Telecast box owned by Dietz. A number of racing slips and some numbers slips were confiscated and two men arrested.

"What's the use of arresting them,"

Safe-Driving Ultimatum Given District Employes by Officials

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Obedience to traffic laws or dismissal from District service was the Commissioners' ultimatum to drivers of official city cars yesterday.

Advised that several recent highway accidents involving District cars were caused by negligence on the part of city employes, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen instructed all department heads that "further negligence or disregard of driving rules will not be tolerated."

In eight accidents during recent weeks, Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal told the Commissioners, the District has been forced to make damage settlements. Careless driving and traffic law infractions were responsible for the crashes, Seal said.

The Commissioners' warning read in part:

"Department heads are requested to issue a warning to those employes under their supervision who operate District motor vehicles that negligence in the operation thereof will not be tolerated and that in cases where negligence is apparent, the driver of the vehicle involved may be subject to dismissal."

The Commissioner also requested department heads to furnish names of employes who have had three or more accidents, together with complete information regarding each mishap.

In line with Hazen's recent decision to enlist the support of private employers in a drive to promote safety on Washington streets, the Jacobs Transfer Co., yesterday also warned employes that traffic carelessness would not be tolerated.

A notice, signed by W. E. Humphreys, president of the concern and member of the District Traffic Advisory Council, read:

"To all supervisors and truck drivers: You are warned for the last time that you must obey all traffic laws—more especially speed. There is no call for speed and you must stand trial and pay your own fines. I will do all in my power to revoke any driver's permit who disobeys.

"I am notifying the Police Department and traffic director to pay special attention to our trucks and enforce the regulations."

Hazen has asked all city employ-

Widespread Earth Tremors Are Felt Through Midwest

Louisville, Ky. (Tuesday), March 9 (AP).—An earth movement, second within a week, was felt here at 11:48 p. m. (Central standard time) last night, and news dispatches reported the shocks were widespread, from Manila, P. I., to Detroit.

Two shocks were reported just before midnight in nearby Lexington; a slight tremor was reported in Indianapolis about the same time, and southeastern Michigan reported buildings shaken and residents wakened within a 50-mile radius of Detroit.

Widespread nature of the disturbance in the Ohio Valley and Great Lakes region was indicated by the many cities which reported shocks. They included:

Lafayette, Crawfordsville, Richmond and Elkhart, Ind.; Ann Arbor and Adrian, Mich.; Huntington, W. Va.; Cincinnati, Dayton, Columbus, Cleveland, Toledo and Lima, Ohio.

(No damage was reported from any point.

Green Plans A. F. L. Steel Union Drive

Federation Claims Rule Over Thousands in Fabrication Jobs.

Country-Wide Campaign to Embrace Workers in Cement Industry.

The American Federation of Labor will conduct a vigorous organizing drive in the steel industry in opposition to John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization, William Green, federation president, said last night.

To Green's statement later was added the announcement by John P. Frey, president of the A. F. of L.'s metal trades department, that he will meet the grievance committee of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation's employe-representation plan at a Pittsburgh conference today or tomorrow.

Frey's announcement, on the heels of Green's statement, was regarded in some quarters as beginning of the A. F. of L. counterdrive against Lewis in the steel industry. It came as a surprise to many because Green himself had rejected an invitation to meet the grievance committee on the ground it is representative of a company union and such a conference would be contrary to A. F. of L. policy.

Promises Parley.

"I'm going to meet them in Pittsburgh," Frey said last night. "I've got to wait until I get to my office tomorrow and look my work over to be sure just when I shall go. All I told them was I would meet with them. I don't know their problems but I do know our form of organization and I shall make it clear to them. I told them 'I will be glad to sit around the table with you and talk things over.'"

Green described plans discussed during the day for countrywide organization campaigns that will embrace workers in the cement and aluminum industries, mills and cereal workers, gas station attendants and agricultural workers.

Green's announcements came at the end of a day-long conference with half a hundred of the federation's leading organizers from all parts of the country, a meeting at which charges and documents intended to link Communists with the Lewis organizing drive were discussed.

The federation head's statement of plans in the steel industry concerned the thousands of workers in steel fabricating plants, as differentiated from the production work. He said that the federation had jurisdiction of the Structural Iron Workers' Union over men in the fabricating work, and added that "we will support the Structural Iron Workers in all efforts to bring into that organization all workers in that department.

"We shall put on a definite and intensive organizing campaign in that branch of the industry."

Seeking One Union.

Lewis' Amalgamated Iron, Steel and Tin Workers' Union seeks to organize all the workers in the industry into one big union.

Asked earlier about Frey's reported acceptance of the invitation, Green said he knew nothing of it, but was certain that if Frey had accepted the invitation had been put on a different basis than the one sent to him. He pointed out that probably Frey intended to undertake to bring employes of the employe representation plan into the regular established unions within the federation, in which case he would be following a logical course in harmony with the established policy of the Federation.

"If machinists now in the employe representation plan want to come into the Machinists Union," Green said, "that is perfectly all right. So with the members of the other crafts in the steel industry.

"The C. I. O. has not hesitated to take in company union men, in fact they've gone out after them. And if men want to break away from the company union and come into the federation unions they will be admitted.

Regarding the other industries, Green said the organization work would be carried out in "an increasingly intensive and accelerated fashion." In cement and some of the other branches Federal unions are to be organized until enough have been formed and chartered to unite them into a national union in each industry.

The federation conference will continue today.

Meanwhile, the C. I. O. forces were preparing for a meeting today at which they will map equally intensive organizing drives, beginning probably on the 1,200,000 workers in the textile industry. The United Textile Workers of America, headed by Francis J. Gorman, was an original member of the Lewis committee and was among the unions sus-

Council May Kill Lower House of Italian Parliament

Rome (Tuesday), March 9 (U.P.).—The Fascist grand council today announced plans to abolish the present Chamber of Deputies or lower house of Parliament.

The historic chamber—formed March 4, 1848, under a constitution granted by King Charles Albert to his Sardinian subjects—will be replaced by a "corporative chamber" within two months.

The chamber at present consists of 400 members elected for five years. The deputies are nominated by the people and selected by the Fascist grand council. Each deputy received $1,050 a year.

Strikes Close 2 Additional Auto Plants

At Least 55,000 Idle as Detroit's Sit-Downs Begin Anew.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, March 8.—A sudden wave of sit-down strikes paralyzed Detroit automotive plans of the huge Chrysler Corporation, one of the industry's "big three," and of the Hudson Motor Car Co., an independent producer, tonight.

The United Automobile Workers of America, an affiliate of the Committee for Industrial Organization, acted swiftly in spreading its campaign for control of the automotive wage earners.

Chrysler executives rejected the union's demand for recognition as sole bargaining agency for the corporation's 67,000 employes.

Union Acts Quickly.

Within two hours U. A. W. A. members "sat down" and halted production in most of the Chrysler, Dodge, Plymouth and De Soto plants in the Detroit area, throwing an estimated 50,000 workers into idleness.

The number was increased by more than 4,000 tonight when a sit-down strike was called at the big Highland Park Chrysler plant, which houses the corporation's main office.

The first Chrysler factory outside of the Detroit area to close was that at New Castle, Ind. There was no strike in it, company officials said it could not operate without supplies from Detroit units.

Stampers Laid Off.

The City Auto Stamping Co., at Toledo, Ohio, laid off 1,300 workers tonight in the department that makes stampings for Dodge trucks.

Before the first of the Chrysler strikes occurred, union representatives, charging that officials of the Hudson company were "stalling" in negotiations on working conditions, called a sit-down strike of about 5,000 of the company's 10,000 employes. Union leaders claimed 1,000 or more held the plant tonight.

General Motors Corporation, its executives still trying to compose issues unsettled in the February 11 agreement which ended widespread strikes in its plants, was confronted with new sit-downs in two of its Flint, Mich., divisions where previous strikes occurred.

No sooner had trouble in the Chevrolet No. 4 motor assembly department been settled, than workers in the press and metals department of the Fisher Body No. 1 staged a sit-down. They evacuated the department tonight after the management agreed to negotiate differences.

Threats Are Charged.

B. E. Hutchinson, Chrysler vice president, charging that nonunion employes had been subjected to "threats, intimidation and coercion from union representatives" both in the Chrysler plants and "at home," asserted the U. A. W. A. in seeking sole bargaining privileges wanted to "force all our employes to go with the union or go out of our employ."

He added: "We have been willing and still are willing to bargain collectively with them for their members. Beyond that, we do not agree to go. Men who wish to work in our plants will not be required to hold a union card to do so."

No Disorder at Chrysler.

No disorder attended the Chrysler strikes. Strikers claiming union membership in the plants of 85 to 90 per cent ushered nonunion employes to the street, and set up guards at the gates. Police permitted any one to leave; no one to enter the plants.

The strikes failed to interrupt the bargaining conferences in which U. A. W. A. officials were engaged with Chrysler executives. Homer Martin, who participated in General Motors negotiations this morning before they were recessed until Wednesday, attended the Chrysler conferences this afternoon accompanied by John Brophy, C. I. O. director.

Martin said afterward: "This strike and the one at the Hudson Motor Car Co. are the results of management's stubborn resistance and unreasonable position concerning the will of a clear majority of employes in plants affected. So long as the company continues to disregard the law and common procedure which operates in government as well as in a corporation, they may expect labor trouble."

Richard T. Frankenstein, U. A. W. A. organizational director, claimed 59,000 Chrysler employes

Frisco Earthquake Topples Chimneys, Shatters Windows

San Francisco, March 8 (AP).—An eathquake about half as strong as the devastating 1906 shock jarred San Francsico early today, left a trail of minor damage in Eastbay cities and sent inspectors scurrying over the two great bridges, which were unscathed.

Windows were broken, chimneys toppled and store goods tumbled on floors in some Eastbay areas, comprising Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, Albany and Richmond.

There were no injuries, and no estimates were announced of the damage.

Lewis Refuses to Pass Picket Line at Willard To Address Court Rally

The Line John L. Lewis Wouldn't Buck

While pickets representing striking waiters and restaurant employes of the Willard Hotel paraded outside, more than 500 members of Labor's Non-Partisan League waited impatiently in an upstairs ballroom of the hotel expecting to hear a scheduled talk by John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chieftain. Lewis failed to show up. The waiters' organization is an A. F. of L. Affiliate.

Wheeler Leads Fight to Block Court Changes

Foes of Measure Marshal U. S. Leaders at Witnesses at Hearings.

By Robert C. Albright.

An imposing cross-section of public sentiment—an outstanding Democratic liberal, a veteran farm chieftain, a noted educator and a former "No. 1" White House adviser—will state the opposition's case against the President's judiciary program when rebuttal testimony is taken by the Senate Judiciary Committee beginning next Monday.

The tentative list of opposing witnesses was agreed on yesterday at a late afternoon conference of the Senate opposition. Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, whose counter espousal of a constitutional amendment is one rallying point of the opposition, was formally announced as their first witness.

Invited to follow Wheeler before the committee in opposition to the court plan will be, in this order, L. J. Taber, of the National Grange; Fred Brenckman, Washington representative of the Grange; Representative William Lemke, North Dakota Republican; President Robert M. Hutchins, of the University of Chicago, and Raymond Moley, magazine editor and adviser to the President in the early days of the New Deal. Prominent leaders of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish churches later will be invited to appear.

Opposition strategy was decided on, as President Roosevelt prepared to go on the radio again tonight in a "fireside chat" for his program, and as the Senate Judiciary Committee gave Administration witnesses right of way at opening of hearings tomorrow. Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, and Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, will open testimony for the plan.

Meantime, in the Senate, Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, cited section 201 of the criminal code, denying use

Waiters' Strike Closes Willard Dining Rooms

Sit-Down of 103 Employes Cripples Meal and Bar Service in Hotel.

White-coated waiters, who usually display a continental politeness, lolled in the chairs of the cocktail lounge at the Willard Hotel last night, refusing to serve a drink.

Far down in the cellar, in the vast kitchen where Calvin Coolidge's hot cakes and country sausages once were prepared, 22 Willard cooks rested on chairs or benches, eating food that had been brought in to them from a quick-order restaurant.

Washington was witnessing its first "sit-down" strike, one affecting 103 waiters, waitresses, cooks and kitchen helpers and which threatened to spread to at least a few bell boys.

The strike was signalized to the public at 6 p. m. when eight pickets, carrying placards, began patroling the three sides of the Willard Hotel.

An hour or so later, Labor's Non-partisan League, called into a national conventoin to indorse President Roosevelt's bill to enlarge the Supreme Court, began assembling in a ballroom on the tenth floor.

The most conspicuous figure in that movement, however, was missing. John L. Lewis, hearing of the strike, said he would not walk through a picket line. The strike leaders agreed to withdraw the pickets for two hours, but Lewis remained adamant. He said he would remain away from the hotel while the strike was in progress.

The Round Robin, a tap room at the Willard's Fourteenth and Pennsylvania avenue corner, was closed by the strike. Not only that but it was dark. So, too, was the grill just below it, and the main dining room that stretches along the Fourteenth street side of the hotel.

The Willard Corner, as the cocktail lounge at the F street corner

A. F. of L. Waiters Stage Sit-Down Strike at Parley.

La Follette Gives Address on Radio

Rivalry Between Groups Hinted as Cause of Labor Crisis.

By William V. Nessly.

Sit-down strikers affiliated with the American Federation of Labor last night kept John L. Lewis away from a scheduled meeting of Labor's Nonpartisan League campaigning for President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan.

The strikers were members of the crew of waiters, waitresses, cooks and kitchen help at Hotel Willard where the pro-Roosevelt court plan labor leaders were scheduled for a night session.

Mr. Lewis, one of the guiding spirits of the league, and a bitter rival of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, with whom he is engaged in a life and death battle for labor leadership, was to have been one of the principal night speakers.

He refused to pass through the picket lines established about 6 p. m. He was not present at the meeting when it was called into session several hours later. He declared from an office outside that he would not enter the hotel, despite an offer by the picketing strikers to withdraw for two hours. Nor did he take part in the national broadcast from the convention rooms starting at 11:30 p. m.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, who addressed the day sessions with a powerful appeal for support of President Roosevelt and the latter's court reorganization plan, spoke at the night session of the league. He repeated his impassioned appeal of the morning session.

Embarrassing for C. I. O.

Throughout discussions of the unique situation by those in attendance ran charges of possible inspiration of the strike with the intention of embarrassing those in charge. Lewis, Sidney Hillman and others active in the league are also leaders of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

The strike was called by the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, Local 781, a federation union.

Maj. George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's industrial co-ordinator and president of the league, took cognizance of the strike as soon as the night session opened, when it was rumored that Lewis would not appear.

Berry declared that last April the league had contracted with the hotel for both office space for the league and halls for meetings, and added that "no one deserves leadership in America unless he keeps his contracts." Then discussing the hotel by name, he declared:

"But I don't intend to be stampeded by a fixed-up situation that contemplates the embarrassment of this convention."

Picket Is Silent.

A picket was asked by a reporter whether the strike had been called at this time because the league was directed by so many of the C. I. O. leaders, but replied, "I have nothing to say."

It was pointed out, however, that numerous A. F. of L. unions are members of the league.

Despite the absence of Lewis, Berry went ahead with the evening session, calling for the report of the resolutions committee and then summoning to the platform various leaders of the league from other cities and States.

Earlier in the day the league, claiming more than 2,000,000 members in labor unions affiliated with it, had opened its intensive drive in support of the President's court reorganization.

Some 600 delegates heard Senator La Follette denounce the "lame ducks" of the Supreme Court, "whose thinking belongs to another generation and has been repudiated by the American people."

They unanimously adopted a resolution indorsing the reform plan, sent to President Roosevelt assurance "that the working people of the country are with him to a man" in the court fight, and then set out for the Capitol to interview their Representatives and Senators with demands that they support the proposal.

Last night they gathered again in

'Crusade' Urged by McGrady For Supreme Court Change

Assistant Secretary of Labor Edward F. McGrady stole the spotlight at the first of the Bronson Cutting memorial lectures last night with a fiery appeal to a distinguished audience to "go out and be vocal" in support of the President's plan to enlarge the United States Supreme Court.

After Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, of New York, charged the courts are one of the factors that retard Democratic processes in the United States and urged action to "make democracy fit the economic conditions of today," McGrady said:

"If Senator Cutting were here he'd be with the President in his attempt to change a judiciary that is standing against the will of the people and the Congress.

"Go out and crusade. Go out and be vocal."

LaGuardia avoided any direct mention of the Supreme Court or the President's plans.

Approximately 1,800 persons responded to invitations to pay tribute to the memory of the late Senator Cutting. Every seat in the Rialto Theater was occupied and approximately 800 persons "overflowed" into the auditorium of the Eighth Street Temple around the corner.

The series of memorial lectures was endowed by Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting as a memorial to her son, a leader of the Senate liberal bloc until his death in an airplane crash two years ago.

Justice Harlan Stone, who was in the audience at the Rialto, missed McGrady's attack on the judiciary, but heard LaGuardia list the courts along with corrupt political machinery, universal ignorance and exploitation of labor as factors that retard democracy.

McGrady was chairman of the

AAA Warning Issued to Help Sharecroppers

Agency to Withhold Checks to Landlords Who Divert Benefits.

By Russell Smith.

Southern landlords who attempt to divert AAA benefit payments from sharecroppers and tenants to their own uses were warned yesterday all such funds will be withheld if the attempts are discovered.

Asserting "a number of complaints from both sharecroppers and standing-rent tenants" have been received by the Southern division of AAA, Cully A. Cobb, dircetor of that division, informed State directors in nine Southern States:

"It will be in order for you to take the necessary steps to bring to the attention of the landlords and landowners in your State the provision quoted above and to advise the various county agents and county committees that they will be expected to follow the foregoing quoted parapraph (on withholding funds) in each instance where the 1937 worksheet shows that there has been a change of status of the tenants on the farm. County committees should make definite recommendations to the State committees in instances where the above provision has been violated.

"By giving this provision the proper publicity at this time, it will no doubt serve to reduce the number of such cases for the year 1937 in your State."

Cobb also called attention in his letter to a clause of the AAA regulations which provides that the Secretary of Agriculture, if he discovers "any person has for 1937 made any change from the 1936 leasing or cropping arrangement for the farm or has adopted any other device for the purpose of, or which would have the effect of diverting . . . any payment to which tenants or sharecroppers would be entitled . . . the amount of any such payment which otherwise would be made to such person may be withheld in whole or in part."

Sharecroppers and tenants, under AAA regulations, are entitled to share in benefit payments, while wage laborers are not. Thus, AAA officials explained, it would be possible for landlords by shifting the status of a tenant or sharecropper to that of a hired hand to obtain a greater share of Federal benefit payments. They added there is no evidence of widespread evasion of the regulations, however.

AAA benefit checks are made out separately for landlords and sharecropper. The extent to which the latter share in the payments for an individual farm is based upon the arrangement in force between owner and tenant on that particular farm. Thus, if a tenant is a "fourth sharecropper"—one who furnishes his own tools, seed and other necessaries, and pays the owner one-fourth of his crop as rent—then owner and sharecropper share equally.

Farley Gives Sick Boy 'Special Rate' On 3-Cent Stamps

Fremont, Ohio, March 8 (AP).—James A. Farley and Wayne Bronson, 11, both have an eye for business, and as a result the Postmaster General today had added a "good customer" to the roster of stamp collectors while Bronson was able to mail 50 letters free.

The boy patient at a tuberculosis sanitarium wrote Farley: "I have to write so many letters that by the time I get finished buying your stamps I am broke.

'Since I am a good customer of yours, I wonder if you wouldn't give me a special rate on your 3-cent stamps here at the sanitarium."

In reply, the little patient received from Farley a package of 50 3-cent stamps and a number of special 'covers" of stamp "first editions" to start a stamp collection.

The Postmaster said he was sorry he couldn't give a bargain on 3-centers.

CoastGuardSpeeds To Aid of Steamer

Boston, March 8 (AP).—Coast Guard headquarters tonight said the steamer William H. Moody, of Portland, Me., reported she was in a "dangerous position" off Cape Porpoise Harbor, Me., and requested immediate aid.

The cutter, Ossipee, on patrol in the vicinity, was ordered to the Moody's aid. Coast Guard said no other details of the ship's plight were available.

New York, March 8 (AP).—Seven transatlantic liners inbound from Euroupe today were reported delayed hours as a result of storms on the European side of the Atlantic. The largest of the six, the Queen Mary, is expected to arrive at 8 a. m. tomorrow. Her usual schedule called for docking about noon today. Others reported late include the Samaria, Ascania, Ile de France, Coma, and the American Farmer and the American Importer.

Fight For and Against Supreme Court Change Appears to Be Battle of Propaganda.

By Franklyn Waltman

WITH virtually every newspaper in the country devoting columns daily to the fight over President Roosevelt's plan for reorganizing the Supreme Court; with each broadcasting network nightly giving us two or three speeches on each side of the question and with the mail each day bringing pleas and counter-arguments, it is clear that this controversy is more a battle of propaganda than it is of legislators.

WALTMAN.

Yet it is strange to hear Senate Democratic Leader Joe Robinson denouncing propaganda efforts. Of course, Senator Robinson is not denouncing all propaganda—only that which is directed against the President's program. When the chain letters and the mimeographed petitions commence flowing in from the ranks of organized labor, the Arkansan will stop talking about propaganda.

It is rather remarkable that Senator Robinson is complaining about propaganda. The only possible reason is that the opponents of the Supreme Court plan to date have outdone the Administration propaganda machine—and that is an achievement, for the Roosevelt Administration has the finest propaganda machine ever known in this country and it does not hesitate to use it.

The full extent of the Administration's publicity machine is now a subject of inquiry by the Senate's special reorganization committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Harry F. Byrd, of Virginia. It is expected that the number of persons in the Federal Government—engaged, directly or indirectly, in publicity or propaganda work and the sums spent for that purpose will be surprising when the investigators complete their reports.

The smallest task of these Federal publicity men is giving information to the press. They write speeches for their chiefs—not only on the work of the department, but on such controversial subjects as the Supreme Court plan. They prepare articles for magazines, which appear under the names of their chiefs. They prepare pamphlets and statements which are circulated throughout the country.

Some idea of the increase in the efforts of the Federal Government to influence public opinion was given some days ago on the House floor by Representative John Taber, ranking Republican on the House Appropriations Committee, during consideration of the Postoffice Department supply bill.

"The expenditures for governmental departments using the frank have increased from an average of about $9,000,000 a year over a period of four or five years ending with the fiscal year 1932, to $14,000,000 in 1933, to $23,000,000 in 1934, to $31,000,000 in 1935, to $32,000,000 in 1936," asserted Mr. Taber. "If we spend at the same rate for the rest of this fiscal year that we did down to the 1st of January, it will be $34,000,000 for the present fiscal year.

"In addition to that figure, the expenses of the Government Printing Office for printing the propaganda and all sorts of things of that kind have increased from approximately $10,000,000 to $20,000,000 a year."

Thus, according to Mr. Taber, the cost of carrying the mail of the executive branch of the Federal Government has increased from approximately $9,000,000 annually to $34,000,000 during the Roosevelt Administration—the latter figure being almost four times the former. Mr. Taber has made a truly amazing statement. In addition, as he points out, the expenses of the Government Printing Office have doubled during that period.

These figures do not take into consideration the salaries of those employed in preparing the matter mailed out. It does not include the costs of mimeographing machines, envelopes and paper. When all the factors of cost are added up the Federal Government's bill for what might be termed publicity may go over $50,000,000 annually. It is to be hoped that Senator Byrd's experts continue and finish that inquiry.

It is not only in the possession of this vast publicity machine that the President has the advantage in his Supreme Court fight. He has the natural advantage of the prestige of his office. His speeches are carried in full by most newspapers. His slightest word is front page news, whereas his opponents must be spectacular or make out a good case to receive equal treatment in the press.

When the President decides to broadcast to the country, all three broadcasting networks carry his speech. They did the same when Attorney General Homer S. Cummings recently defended the court plan. But the radio companies will not simultaneously broadcast a speech by one of the opponents of the plan—although they have been fair and generous in allotting time to the opponents.

In addition, the President has the advantage of the Democratic National Committee organization, not alone for such publicity task as writing speeches for the proponents of the plan, but also for putting the heat under recalcitrant members of Congress. W. Forbes Morgan, treasurer of the national committee, has been particularly active in seeking to arouse State chairmen and their organizations to support the Supreme Court plan. And yet the opponents seem to be getting the better response, as judged from Senator Robinson's complaints.

Senator Robinson is not averse to engaging in a little adroit propaganda himself. A week or so ago he read in the Senate a letter which bore the salutation, "Dear Christian friend" and closed with the phrase "brother in Christ." The letter opposed the Supreme Court plan. Because of the religious phrasing in the letter—and for no other apparent reason—Senator Robinson said it sounded to him like a Ku Klux Klan letter.

It now develops that the author of the letter was a clergyman and he declares that he is not a member of the Klan or any other secret society and never has been. Of course, Senator Robinson knew what he was doing—he was deliberately trying to create the impression that the Ku Klux Klan was fighting the Supreme Court program.

A similar incident occurred over the week-end. Senator James P. Pope, of Idaho, received a printed circular bearing what purported to be the symbol of the K. K. K. Written across the bottom in pencil were the words: "Hands Off the Supreme Court." Senator Pope hastened to tell the Associated Press all about it.

That news organization sent out to the country a news story asserting that "'Hands Off the Supreme Court' circulars, bearing the letters 'K. K. K.' showed up today in Congressional mail." The Associated Press also distributed a photograph of the circular with the caption: "'K. K. K.' Circular Mailed Senators." An explanatory note indirectly quoted Senator Pope as asserting that "members of Congress were receiving 'K. K. K.' circulars."

The story and photograph, each referring to the receipt of more than one circular, gave the impression that the K. K. K. was actively propagandizing Capitol Hill over the Supreme Court. Diligent inquiry, however, fails to disclose that any member of Congress, outside of Senator Pope, received the circular and he received only the one. The Idahoan after the publication of these accounts cited said he knew of no other Senators who had received the circular, but had not inquired.

Thus, it is necessary to be on guard against the propaganda in this controversy, even when it comes in forms of photographs.

Apropos of the Supreme Court's unexplained delay in rendering decisions on the Washington minimum wage law and the Wagner labor relations act, a Capitol Hill wag suggests that perhaps the nine old men are graciously waiting for the arrival of the six new justices in order that they might participate in formulating these opinions. Another suggestion was that the high tribunal had gone on a "sit-down strike."

Conference Is Sought On Red Rider Repeal

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday said he was trying ot make arrangements for a Senate-House conference on the red rider repeal legislation for Thursday morning.

The House managers are ready, he said, and the decision as to the time rests with Senator Black (Democrat), of Alabama, chairman of the Senate conferees.

Burns Papers Torn Up, Senate Inquiry Reveals

Detective Agency Charged With Trying to Mislead Liberties Committee.

By the Associated Press.

Senate investigators said yesterday they had seized several sackloads of shredded documents from waste paper baskets in the St. Louis office of the William J. Burns Detective Agency a few hours after its records had been subpenaed by the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee.

Committee Secretary Robert Wohlforth testified the thousands of scraps of paper—seized between August 12 and 15, 1936—had been pieced together after weeks of painstaking work by Senate agents.

The reconstructed documents, he said, included scores of reports from Burns labor spies working in factories at or near St. Louis.

Throws Bundle on Table.

As the day's hearing drew to a close, Wohlforth unexpectedly heaved the heavy bundle of "waste paper" on the witness table directly in front of Raymond J. and W. Sherman Burns, president and treasurer of the detective firm.

Throughout the questioning by Chairman La Follette (Progressive), Wisconsin, they denied steadily that they ever sought to conceal the agency's records from the committee.

"Do you wish to make any comment on the destruction of these documents by your St. Louis office?" the Senator demanded.

"I can't understand why it was done," replied the agency treasurer. "Our men generally understood that we intended to give the committee everything."

Effort to "Mislead" Charged.

La Follette then bluntly accused agency employes of "withholding or falsifying documents" in an effort to "mislead" the committee.

Earlier Burns has testified spying on "Communists" and "radical labor agitators" was a "lucrative part" of the business which earned the agency a gross income of $505,025 in 1935.

Denying his firm "creates labor trouble," he acknowledged that it benefited from it "just like a doctor profits from sickness."

When Senator Thomas (Democrat), Utah, asserted the agency's "real purpose is to fight the organization of labor for collective bargaining," Burns replied:

"We don't fight anything. We just tell our clients what their employes are doing and thinking, and then the client can do what he pleases."

He acknowledged the agency had offered to help "purge" the pay rolls of Pacific Coast business firms of "Communists or radical labor agitators," shortly after a series of American Federation of Labor strikes in 1934.

"All industry is in great danger from Communists," he said. "Any firm would be justified in eliminating workers who try to socialize the plant."

Mother, Physician And Unborn Child Claimed by Death

Washington, Ind., March 8 (AP).—Death struck three times, claiming an 18-year-old wife, her unborn child and her attending physician, just as she was about to give birth to the child, her first, in a farm home near Shoals today.

Dr. E. E. Long, of Shoals, called to assist Dr. Charles F. Hope in the delivery of Mrs. Roy Boyd's baby, said Dr. Hope and Mrs. Boyd died of heart attacks at about the same time.

"The child could not be born without the aid of forceps," Dr. Long said, "and we were attempting to change the position of the baby when Dr. Hope fell to the floor. I ran around the bed to him immediately. He was dead. I returned to the patient only to find that she, too, had died, and with her the unborn infant."

Mitchell to Ask Inquiry in Case Of Colored Cadet

Representative Arthur W. Mitchell, colored Congressman from Chicago, said yesterday he would demand a Congressional investigation of the dismissal of James Lee Johnson, jr., colored Washington boy, from the Naval Academy at Annapolis.

"It was a forced resignation," Mitchell said, adding he had documents "which prove that there was an organized movement to oust the boy from the time he entered the Academy." He said he would appoint two more colored boys, despite the fact that Johnson was the fourth colored boy to be dismissed from the Academy. None has ever graduated.

Johnson, who lives at 1737 S street northwest, was declared deficient in eyesight and studies, and had accumulated more than the allowed number of demerits. His resignation, with those of 134 other midshipmen similarly deficient physically or scholastically, was accepted February 11. Mitchell appealed to the President, but the case was declared officially closed two weeks ago by Secretary Swanson.

Liquor Control Act Change Is Urged

An amendment to the District liquor control act under which the United States District Court would review rulings of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board was proposed yesterday by Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland.

Palmisano offered a bill to amend Section 6, Paragraph 1 of the bill by substituting the District Court for the Board of Commissioners as the appellate agency.

The power to review would relate only to cases in which licenses are involved. These would include denials of appliactions, suspensions of more than 30 days or revocations of permits, or refusals to sanction transfer of licenses.

Hurja Retires As Democratic Political Head

National Committee Chief Will Resign Within Sixty Days.

kob had rejected when Hurja attempted to interest him in them in 1928—are regarded as primarily the cause of Farley's remarkably accurate forecasts of the outcome of the 1934 Congressional and 1936 Presidential elections. Hurja says of his methods that he believes the sound approach to formation of political opinions is by "an analysis of election figures by States, counties and subdivisions to spot the trends."

Delegate From Alaska.

Hurja went to the Democratic National Convention as a delegate from Alaska, where he had lived, although he maintains a voting residence in Michigan.

On the basis o fhis deductions Democratic campaign directors concentrated on so-called doubtful States, deluging them with money and oratory. Hurja also kept patronage books, making it his business to "take as much of the work off his (Farley's) shoulders as I could." His detailed records of regional party strength served as a guide in accepting or rejecting applicants for jobs.

"The real benefit of such work comes when there are hairline decisions," he said of his analyses. "There wasn't much to it last year. The general trend now is toward wide fluctuations of public interest and landslide elections which I believe will become more pronounced because of the greater comparative ease in reaching the public."

7-1 Odds on Nomination.

As early as August of 1935 Hurja spotted Gov. Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, as a 7-to-1 shot for the Republican Presidential nomination, enabling Democratic chieftains to direct their pre-primary fire at the Kansan.

"We knew we would carry Kansas, too," Hurja said. "When I first met John Hamilton (Republican National Committee chairman) in April of 1936 he remarked that he had a great deal of faith in my figures. I told him then that he might like to know Mr. Roosevelt would carry any State from which the Republicans could select a candidate."

An incident Hurja recalls with pride occurred in 1934 when he went back to his home town of Crystal Falls, Mich., to vote in the Congressional election. He told a local reporter then that the Democratic candidate would win by a majority of about 3,460 votes, although the district normally was Republican. The actual Democratic majority was 3,017.

Baldness is Not Inherited

SCIENTISTS who study the laws of inheritance have found that "acquired characteristics" are not inherited. Baldness is in all cases acquired many years after birth and it is therefore agreed that it is not inherited.

Thomas case histories further prove that many men who are bald have fathers and grandfathers with good heads of hair. It is also found that many men keep good heads of hair throughout life even though their fathers were bald at early ages.

Eighty-five percent of all cases of baldness can be traced to neglect or to one or more of 14 local scalp disorders. Thomas treatment overcomes all of these local scalp conditions—ends dandruff, stops falling hair and re-grows hair on the thin and bald spots. Come in today and receive the benefit of sound advice from a Thomas expert. No charge is made for consultation nor for scalp examination. (Always in private).

Maxwell Girl's Lawyer Hints At Jury Perjury

Affidavits Submitted as Proof of Prejudice at Wise Hearing.

By Frederic B. Tuttle.
A Staff Correspondent.

Wise, Va., March 8.—In a surprise move, Charles Henry Smith, defense counsel for Edith Maxwell, former mountain school teacher, twice convicted of murder in the death of her father, Trigg Maxwell, blacksmith-miner of Pound, charged three members of the jury that found her guilty in her second trial were prejudiced and had definite opinions at the time they took their oaths and sat in the jury box.

Smith's move, as hearing on his motion for a new trial before Judge Ezra Carter opened today, caused postponement of arguments on the motion until tomorrow afternoon, in order that Commonwealth's Attorney Fred M. Greear and Special Prosecutor O. M. Vicars might investigate the affidavits which Smith submitted as substantiation of his charge.

These affidavits are nine in number. Tomorrow seven of the men who signed them will take the stand and testify. In rebuttal, it is expected the Commonwealth will introduce the three jurors named in the affadavits.

Smith said late today the affidavits, which were submitted to Judge Carter, presiding jurist at the second trial, which ended December 17, were from people typical of this area.

One of them, Smith asserted, is a preacher with several congregations in the mountains not far from where John Fox, jr., long ago wrote his classic "Trail of the Lonesome Pine." Another runs a restaurant. The other five who will appear are coal miners.

Following the first trial of the 22-year-old school teacher, it was charged in the affidavits, the three jurors named had stated had they been on the venire that found her guilty of first-degree murder, they would have recommended an even more severe sentence than the 25 years meted out.

The affidavits threaten to bring perjury into the case, inasmuch as these men were under oath when they stated they had no opinions or prejudices when they were sworn in for the second trial in December.

The Commonwealth, amazed by Smith's action, asked until Friday in which to "investigate" the charge. But Judge Carter agreed only to the delay of a single day.

In his motion, filed with Deputy Clerk Charles Fuller, Smith declared a third trial should be awarded. He said the record "showed affirmatively that the defendant has not had a fair trial on account of misconduct of the Commonwealth's attorney and the trial judge, the admission of improper and immaterial and irrelevant testimony and admission of insinuating and prejudicial testimony which had no connection with the issues of this case."

The "improper conduct" included two remarks attributed to Greear in talking to the jury which Smith contends were prejudicial to the case.

One was a reference to Edith and her mother, Mrs. Ann Maxwell, who is under joint indictment in the blacksmith's death, and another was made, the defense said, when Greear remarked that Edith probably decided on the night of her father's death, July 21, 1935, to "go and kill."

The defense contended "misconduct" by the trial judge was in the statement, "I think we are," in reply to defense counsel's remark, "we are not dealing with an ax."

Thirty-eight assignments of error, emphasizing the admission of the testimony of neighbors that a small ax was missing a week before the 52-year-old blacksmith was found dying in the kitchen doorway, were in the motion.

The contention that "evidence points just as strongly to the death of Trigg Maxwell by natural causes as it does to death by some injury inflicted on the head" was emphasized in the motion.

While the State's experts admitted they could not testify positively and beyond a doubt that Trigg Maxwell died from a blow on the head, the motion declared, "the Commonwealth relied upon medical testimony to prove said corpus delicti."

Western Md. College Youth Poison Victim

W. F. Coleman, 21, Found Dead in Dormitory Bed by Own Hand.

By the Associated Press.

Westminster, Md., March 8.—William F. Coleman, of Cumberland, 21-year-old Western Maryland College student, committed suicide in his dormitory room here today by drinking poison.

Frank Brown, drum major of the student band and a friend of Coleman, found the youth's body when he went to Coleman's room to talk with him about some class papers. Brown said Coleman was in bed, wearing a dressing gown, and had a rosary clutched in his hand.

Acting Coroner Sherman E. Flanagan, who, with State's Attorney George N. Fringer, investigated the death, returned the verdict of suicide and deemed an inquest unnecessary. He said a vial containing a small quantity of poison was found near the body.

William Klaire, of Washington, a fellow student, said he visited Coleman in the latter's room about 10 o'clock last night. He said Coleman appeared in good spirits and was preparing for bed. Another student, John Barkol, of Hagerstown, saw Coleman half an hour later in a washroom and described him as appearing happy and fully normal.

Friends of the youth said, however, that he had been depressed and moody lately.

Brown said he and Coleman attended a meeting of their fraternity, Gamma Beta Chi, last night, returing to the dormitory about 8 p. m. Brown said he missed Coleman in class today and went to his room to see him about the papers.

Acting Coroner Flanagan said several letters were found in the room. Two were addressed to Miss Veronica Colen, an aunt, of Cumberland. Another was addressed to a cousin, Miss Catherine Coleman, of Notre Dame College, Baltimore.

The letters were held unopen pending instructions from the youth's family. Coleman's father is James J. Coleman, of Cumberland.

Dean Samuel B. Schofield, of Western Maryland, said young Coleman was a satisfactory student and described his death as a "shock, and a loss to the student body."

WomanHunted In Shooting of Attorney Fitts

Footprints Found Near Scene of Ambuscade; Threat Made Public.

By the United Press.

Los Angeles, March 8.—Possibility that a woman was involved in the plot to assassinate District Attorney Buron Fitts arose tonight when the prints of a woman's shoes were found leading toward the road where the prosecutor was ambushed and wounded.

Sheriff's deputies, making a minute search of the premises for chance clues, stumbled upon the well-defined marks of a woman's shoe in the orchard and near the front porch of Fitts' home.

The discovery lent added significance to a neighbor's statement that two men and a woman, in a small sedan, drove up to the Fitts driveway last Thursday, closely inspected the grounds and then departed.

Descriptions Tally.

The neighbors' description of the car tallied with that of the machine, bearing three persons, which pulled out in front of the district attorney as he was driving to the nearby home of his father last night and discharged a volley of revolver shots, one striking Fitts in the left forearm.

The victim, propped up in bed in a hospital, was directing the search for his assailants tonight.

Threat Sent Fitts.

Los Angeles, March 8 (AP).—A crude warning to "keep your eyes on the road to liberty," mailed to District Attorney Buron Fitts two hours before the prosecutor was shot and wounded from ambush came to light today as investigators spurred a search for his assailant.

The letter came to the prosecutor's office this morning. It was handprinted with purple crayon, and was postmarked at the Los Angeles Arcade station at 6 p. m., yesterday, two hours and ten minutes before Fitts was shot.

Investigators' tests of the letter did not reveal any fingerprints or other possible clews to identity of the writer.

Threat Is Recalled.

Officers sought a man who they said threatened recently to "get" Fitts. Plummer said a news vendor told him one of three men talking in a cafe declared a few days ago, "I'll get Fitts if it is the last thing I do on earth."

Chief of Police Charles Dice, of Santa Monica, reported he had warned Fitts to be careful because of a telephoned threat he, Dice, received yesterday in connection with the Douglas Aircraft factory strike.

American University Dismisses Professor With Nazi Leanings

Dr. C. C. Tansill Refuses to Discuss Whether He Was Fired.

Dr. Charles C. Tansill, outspoken defender of Adolf Hitler and the Nazi regime, has been removed from the faculty of American University, it was learned by The Post yesterday.

Dr. Tansill, who scored American Ambassador Dodd in a public address here last November for his "open denunciation" of the National Socialist government and his "continued unsympathetic" attitude toward it, refused to comment on his ouster.

"I do not remember," he said, when asked if he severed connections with the institution or if he was fired.

The dismissal took place January 30, according to advices to The Post. The date was confirmed by Dr. Tansill, who revealed he will draw pay from the institution until September under the provisions of an unwritten agreement.

"Naturally, it would not be expedient for me to talk," Tansill, who is an author and historian, said. "I have to sing small."

Questioned as to whether the publicity given his November address was the reason for his leaving the institution, Dr. Tansill significantly said: "A write-up on the last talk I gave on Germany appeared in The Post. I have not uttered a word since."

The professor said any statement he might make would be regarded with "hostility" from American University officials. It also would prejudice his future hope for employment, he feels, since "at present there is strong, hysterical opposition to the principles of Der Fuehrer."

Stating that academic freedom "must be a wonderful atmosphere," but that "I do not know where that wonderful Utopia exists," Dr. Tansill continued to parry further questions on his reported dismissal, but when asked "How about September?" said with a smile, "Ah, that's a different thing."

Officials at American University could not be reached last night for a statement. Dr. Joseph M. M. Gray, the chancellor, was out of town.

DR. CHARLES C. TANSILL.

The ousted academician has been professor of history at the institution since 1918. He is a recognized authority both in the field of history and in the field of international relations. In 1925 he was selected to prepare for the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations the official report on World War responsibility, and in 1931 he was invited by Johns Hopkins University to give the Albert Shaw lectures in American diplomacy.

He is the author of several authoritative monographs on certain phases of American foreign policy, and a new book, "America Goes to War," will be released by his publishers May 15.

Last September Dr. Tansill broadcast a talk from Berlin under the auspices of the Carl Schurz Foundation. The talk was relayed here by short wave.

were members of the union. He said, "We regret this situation. We thought the Cnrysler management would be more liberal in its viewpoint."

George F. Addes, union secretary-treasurer, said the U. A. W. A., which had a membership of 40,000 last April, would have 300,000 dues-paying members by the end of March.

The Briggs Manufacturing Co., which manufactures bodies for Chrysler and other producers, closed its Mack avenue plant and part of its Meldrum avenue unit this afternoon, throwing 4,500 out of work. Officials said the shutdwon resulted from the Chrysler strike.

Four thousand Hudson strikers who left the plant late today formed two moving picket lines, marching two abreast over a two-block-long area to block entrances to the administration building and factory. Those who stayed in the plant let down ropes from windows to hoist food and other supplies.

A. N. Doll, president of the U. A. W. A. local at the Hudson plant, who has conducted conferences with A. E. Barit, company president, for two weeks, said:

"Hudson workers are determined that their local union be officially recognized as representing them before the management. * * * During the negotiations the company has done nothing but stall. This is the result."

Doll described the strikers' demands as: Recognition of Local 154, U. A. W. A., as sole bragaining agency; straight seniority, minimum wages of 85 cents an hour for men and 75 cents for women, and a blanket increase "to make Hudson wages equal to those in other automobile plants."

The conferees at General Motors have reached a tentative agreement on all points except the union's demand for a national minimum hourly wage. There had been indications they were near a final agreement, before today's difficulties at Flint. In addition to Martin, William S. Knudsen, executive vice president of General Motors, rejoined the negotiations today for the first time since the early days of the conference.

Mrs. Margolin, 58, Kills Self by Gas

Returning home from school with a headache yesterday, 10-year-old John Davy found Mrs. Liubov Lisa Margolin, 58, dead on the floor in the kitchen at 6603 Potomac avenue northwest.

The dead woman, a tenant in the Davy home, was found on the floor with four gas jets on the stove open. She was pronounced dead a short time later by a doctor from Emergency Hospital.

A note addressed to the husband written in Russian was found in the Margolin apartment. Translated, the note said: "I am tired of living, and cannot continue."

Arnold Margolin, the husband, told police his wife had been despondent over ill health for some time and had attempted to slash her wrists with a razor in Copenhagen two years ago.

The dead woman is survived by three daughters. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

pended by the federation for "dual unionism."

Another drive to be discussed today will be one to bring all the oil field, refinery and filling station workers into another Lewis union, the Oil Field, Gas and Refinery Workers, of which Harvey J. Fremming is president.

Lewis Group Statement.

Flush with its recent victories in the automobile and steel industries, the Lewis committee yesterday issued a statement saying:

"Seldom in the world's history has any social movement achieved such speedy and spectacular success as has the Committee for Industrial Organization.

"The establishment of unionism in the steel industry and the winning of an agreement from the Carnegie-Illinois Corporation, chief subsidiary of United States Steel, have broken the backbone of employing class opposition to labor organization in the United States.

"The whole battle has not been won as yet, it is true. But it has begun under such favorable auspices and with such a series of successes in the most strategic industries as to make ultimate victory—strong unions in all the great industries—seem inevitable."

Republic Steel Corporation employe representatives and management made "progress toward the adjustment of wage rates, hours and the setting up of a broader vacation plan" after an all-day conference, the Associated Press reported from Cleveland.

loan payable in either francs, pounds or dollars at the option of the holder, nevertheless, in response to your specific inquiry and in view of American legislation, it does envisage objections to the appointment of an agent in New York for the purpose of making such payment, in dollars. (It was learned that no agent other than J. P. Morgan & Co. had been considered.)

"Secretary Morgenthau appreciates the co-operative attitude of Minister Auriol in informing him of the details of the financial program of the French government, and hopes that the new loan will be a great success."

Further Comment Rejected.

Senator Robinson, after reading this statement, withheld further comment. Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), Idaho, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said: "The conference was in unanimous accord with the action taken by the Secretary of the Treasury."

Others present, including Speaker of the House William B. Bankhead, of Alabama; Representative Sam D. McReynolds (Democrat), Tennessee; chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee, and Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the Treasury, nodded assent.

At his Monday press conference, held later in the day, Secretary Morgenthau made it clear to newsmen that there is no way in which the Treasury can check small purchases of French bonds by American investors if the transaction takes place in France. Large movements of American capital are reported voluntarily by banks in this country at the present time, he said.

Sees Legal Question.

He held that Federal district attorneys would have to determine whether shipment of American funds to France for investment in the defense loan would be a violation of the Johnson act.

The expression, "and hopes that the new loan will be a great success," in the Morgenthau note to France, was generally regarded as unusual. Some observers have held that the American attitude of favorable co-operation with the near-desperate French financing, much of which goes to match armaments with Germany, explains the recent hostile tone of the Nazi press, which rose to unprecedented heights in lashing at the remark recently made by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuradia, of New York, in criticism of Hitler.

Remark Hinted "Peg."

These quarters believe that the Third Reich, angered by the Anglo-American determination to preserve France as a strong partner in the tripartite monetary accord of last autumn, thus backing her with their vast stabilization funds, seized on the LaGuardia remark as a peg on which to hang criticism of the United States. It was noted that Secretary Morgenthau was referred to repeatedly in the German tirades.

Spanish Rebels Hurl New Drive Against Madrid

Insurgents Reported Ready to Throw Fresh Troops Into Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 8.—Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco hurled troops at uppre Guadalajara defenses today in what was believed to be the opening phase of intense fighting for possession of Madrid.

After lengthy artillery preparation, tanks and infantry surged time and again against the line stretching from La Toba, west of the Guadalajara-Aragon highway northeast of Madrid, to Abanades, further east from that road.

Government officers declared the attacks were repulsed with heavy losses.

Defense Commander Gen. Jose Miaja said the attacks smacked of trickery, and proceeded to bolster his defenses closer to home.

Thus, while the fighting continued 65 miles northeast of Madrid, sharp eyes peered over parapets in the El Pardo and Jarama sectors looking for the main insurgent offensive.

Fresh Troops Reported.

Reports persisted that the insurgents had brought up thousands of fresh troops which might be thrown into the fray at any moment.

Miaja, recently rewarded for successful defense of Madrid with extension of his command to include outlying sectors, will take personal charge of troops wherever the insurgents strike.

The spearhead of the present offensive was directed at Almadrones, just west of the Aragon highway. Reports late tonight said insurgent airplanes were aiding the attacks by bombing trenches and machine-gunning supply trains.

Sharp vigilance in the Madrid sector was being maintained, especially at El Pardo, 10 miles northwest of the capital. This strongly fortified position commands an approach to the highway connecting Madrid with the Guadarrama Mountain front and to pipelines supplying Madrid with water.

Deadlocked After Clash.

Dispatches from Andujar said insurgent and government forces clashed at a cross road near Pozo Blanco, where a stalemate existed after hours of fighting.

The reports said the government troops, operating in the enemy's rear, blew up a bridge on the Cordoba-Penarroya railroad and forced the insurgents to rely entirely on trucks for bringing up supplies in the southern area.

From Barcelona, it was reported a tri-motor warplane dropped eight bombs at the French vessel, Marie Therese, grounded near Palamos, but failed to score a hit.

her as en route from Plymouth to Liverpool.

The London admiralty, after publishing the message from the Echo which identified the Mar Cantabrigo, closed for the night and made no further information available.

Marine officials at St. Jean de Luz, France, reported earlier that a Basque government patrol boat was sunk by the Canarias in the region from which the SOS call came.

The commandant of the French naval station at Rochefort reported interception of a message sent by the Adda to the Canaries asking it to stand by until British naval craft could arrive.

Incident Climaxed Drama.

The luckless voyage of the Mar Cantabrico was one of the most dramatic incidents of the Spanish war from the American viewpoint.

The revelation early in January that the State Department at Washington had issued permits for Robert Cuse to ship aboard her airplanes and other supplies known to be destined for the Spanish war showed a loophole in the United States' neutrality legislation—that it did not apply to civil conflict.

Under President Roosevelt's pressure Congress hastened to remedy that defect. It was a race between the legislative processes of the United States and the anxious munitions shipper. All January 5 loading of the Mar Cantabrico was carried on feverishly.

January 6 Congress acted, but a few hours too late. Both houses approved legislation that would have held the Spanish ship's cargo at her Brooklyn dock, but there was a technical delay which prevented the President from signing the bill that day.

Lady Peace Aboard.

Meanwhile, the Mar Cantabrico sailed. Her cargo was known to include eight airplanes, including the famous Lady Peace, the plane in which Crooner Harry Richman and Pilot Dick Merrill had made a transatlantic flight to England a few months before.

Just off Sandy Hook the Mar Cantabrico was halted by the United States Coast Guard and turned back, on a libel action against her cargo, brought by Bert Acosta and Gordon Berry, American fliers who charged the Spanish government owed them pay for war flying in Spain.

The Coast Guard had to release her after brief detention, and at 4:15 p. m. she steamed past Ambrose Light and out of United States territorial waters. Even to the last minute the Government did not give up. The Coast Guard cutter Icarus trailed her until further efforts to halt her were out of the question.

The Mar Cantabrico arrived in Vera Cruz January 13. The Mexican government had assured Washington that transshipment for Spain of arms originating in the United States would not be permitted in Mexican ports.

However, three of the planes the ship had taken from New York were shifted at Vera Cruz to another Spanish government munitions runner, the Motomar, and it was reported two more American planes were stowed aboard the Mar Cantabrico there.

Waiters' Strike Closes Willard Dining Rooms

Sit-Down of 103 Employes Cripples Meal and Bar Service in Hotel.

is called, was dimly lighted. The waiters in their handsome uniforms sat off in one corner, discussing the strike. The bartender, however, remained on the job. The few persons who went into the lounge discovered to their astonishment that they could get a drink.

They were served by two girls, a hat checker and a comely cashier. It was explained that they were not members of a union.

However, not many customers came in to buy a drink, since the cocktail corner had every appearance of being closed.

As the pickets with their placards appeared in front of the hotel and the waiters and cooks took their seats, Morris L. Verbov, business agent of Local 781 of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, explained that the strike was "for union recognition." He added:

"The union claims that union employes, working in the Willard, have been intimidated and coerced from time to time, and the firing of two shop foremen in the last two months, one of them having been employed in the Willard for ten years and the other for five years, forces the union to demand a union shop.

"Representatives of the Department of Labor and International Representative Miguel Garriga, of the Hotel and Restaurant Employes International Alliance, who arrived in the city last Saturday, failed to bring about an understanding between Local 781 and the management of the Willard Hotel."

A spokesman for the union said that trouble began just before the New Year when the waitresses were organized. Officials of the hotel, this spokesman said, gave orders to dispense with the ring leaders in the union movement.

L. Gardner Moore, vice president and manager of the Shoreham Hotel and president of the Washington Hotel Association, last night issued the following statement:

"The strike called by the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, Local 781, came as a distinct shock to all members of the Hotel Association of Washington.

"Many weks of negotiation between the union and the hotel association culminated in what was believed to be a satisfactory arrangement between all of the hotels, including the Willard, the latter part of February.

"This resulted in a substantial raise in wages, amounting to about 10 per cent on the average for waiters and cooks. These new increases were made although hotel patronage in Washington remains far below the predepression figures.

"On February 28 the Willard discharged an employe for gross incompetence and was immediately presented with a new agreement demanding a close union shop of operation.

"As the hotels understand this case, the only question involved is that of a closed shop.

"The nature of the hotel business, involving service to the public is such that the hotels cannot share their responsibility with anyone and therefore the closed union shop is impossible for the Willard or any other hotel in Washington."

Harry Summerville, manager of the Willard, refused to make a statement last night. However, it was stated Saturday that the policy of the Willard Hotel in regard to its employes is as follows:

No objection will be made to any employes joining any labor organization.

No discrimination in any form will be made against any employe because of his or her membership in, or affiliation with, any labor organization.

The management holds itself ready to discuss with the duly constituted representatives of any labor arganization of which its employes are members any problem concerning employment.

Headquarters detectives appeared in the hotel lobby shortly after the strike started. Chief of Detectives Bernard W. Thompson dropped in later. However, there was nothing for them to do, nor for the uniformed men who walked up and down outside.

The waiters' union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Therefore, the strikers were much cheered when John L. Lewis, who has split with the A. F. of L., thought enough of their fight to remain away from the hotel.

Mediation Committee Fails.

Maj. George L. Berry, president of Labor's Nonpartisan League, anxious to pave the way for Lewis' appearance for a speech, appointed a committee of prominent labor leaders to mediate the strike with the waiters' union and the hotel management. After an hour or so of talk, it was announced that the negotiations had been postponed to this morning.

The committee appointed by Berry is headed by Frank Martel, of Detroit, and includes A. D. Lewis, of this city, brother of John L.; Joseph Obergfeld, of Cincinnati, and Dennis Lane, of Chicago.

Hotel officers expressed the fear that the strike would spread to the bellboys, in which eventuality hotel guests would find it necessary to carry their own bags.

A member of the hotel staff last night said difficulties with the union originated over discharge of a waitress in the hotel coffee shop.

The union took the young woman's case before the National Labor Relations Board, which decided, the hotel spokesman said, that not sufficient evidence had been produced to show that the discharged employe was competent.

Hotel officials considered the decision in favor of the management, but union officials, it was learned, viewed it as inconclusive.

One official of the hotel who declined to be quoted by name, said the discharged employe had been an active organizer for the union and indicated that one of the objections to continuing the waitress in the employ of the hotel was that she had conducted her union activities during working hours.

Elders Oppose, YouthSupports Court Proposal

Public Opinion Institute Reports Disagreement According to Age.

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 8.—When President Roosevelt asked Congress for power to name additional justices to the Supreme Court he split the country into two camps that are strikingly divided along age lines today.

If you are an American citizen between the ages of 21 and 44 the odds are a little better than even that you favor President Roosevelt's plan to reorganize the court.

If you are 45 or older the chances are that you oppose the President's plan.

This is not a speculation based on one man's opinion. It is the result of a scientific poll conducted in every State of the Union by the American Institute of Public Opinion. The institute put its question on the Supreme Court to a cross-section of the voters, inquiring at the same time, "What is your approximate age?"

The institute finds a majority of younger voters—persons between 21 and 44—take sides with Roosevelt.

But at 45 the tide of opinion turns the other way, for a majority of Americans 45 and over vote against changes in the court.

Last fall the institute found that the age of 45 was a similar dividing line between those who favored Roosevelt and those who favored Landon. A majority under that age reported they would vote Democratic; a majority over it, Republican.

Today, however, fewer young people favor Roosevelt's court proposal than favored him as a candidate.

The institute survey shows that the American voters most in favor of changing the court are those between 35 and 44. Young men and women who have come of voting age during the administrations of President Roosevelt are also in favor of the White House plan. Voters in their late twenties and early thirties, however, are almost evenly divided.

Voters most opposed to the President's plan are those of 55 and over.

Opinion at the five age levels divides as follows:

	Per cent Favoring Plan	Per cent Opposing Plan
Age 21-24	54	46
Age 25-34	50+	50—
Age 35-44	55	45
Age 45-54	48	52
Age 55, over	42	58

The United States as a whole opposes the plan by a slight margin. This was established in institute figures published a few days ago. At that time the institute found 53 per cent of the voters against changing the court to 47 per cent in favor of the changes suggested by President Roosevelt.

On Wednesday the institute commences a complete new survey to discover whether President Roosevelt's radio speeches have had an effect on public opinion throughout the 48 States.

Expert Outlines Health Danger Of Bad Teeth

Five States Dental Clinic Draws 2,000 Delegates From East Coast.

Declaring that the pyorrhetic mouth is "full of danger to the dealth of the individual," Dr. Arthur Q. Penta, bronchoscopist from Schenectady, N. Y., said yesterday that patients may avoid lung abcesses and other infections by submitting to regular examination. He spoke before the Five State Dental Clinic held in the Wardman Park Hotel. The clinic was attended by 2,000 degelates from nine Eastern States.

Illustrating his lecture with motion pictures of bacteria taken through a high powered microscope, Dr. Penta warned that though these infections are preventable and curable, they, if neglected, may prove fatal.

After the end of the lecture, Dr. Chevalier Jackson, jr., of Temple University Medical School, himself a bronchoscopist of wide reputation, in admiration of Dr. Penta's pictures said they were the "finest visualization of these organisms ever made."

Son of Founder.

Dr. Jackson is the son of the founder of the Chevalier Jackson Clinic, which some months ago removed a nail from the lung of a boy sent to Philadelphia from Australia.

Deprecating the importance of that operation which at the time attracted country-wide attention, Dr. Jackson indicated it was an every day "one and a half minute" event unworthy of the publicity given it.

Commenting on the "pain-killer" discovered by Dr. Leroy Hartman, of Columbia University, Dr. Penta said the great confusion it caused arose from a misunderstanding. The compound, he said, was an anodine (eases pain), not an anesthetic (kills pain).

Gives Clinic Record.

Dr. Thaddeus P. Hyatt, preventive dentist formerly with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. of New York, in an interview given before the lecture began, said that by use of preventive methods, the New York University dental clinic had not lost a single first molar in seven years.

One faulty fissure, a cavity usually unfillable because of its small size, contains 8,400,000,000 bacteria, he said.

The Five State Clinic last night held a stag banquet. Scientific lectures will be given today and tomorrow by Dr. John T. Ashton, of Alexandria, Va.; Dr. U. Garfield Rickert, of the University of Michigan Dental School; Dr. Oliver C. Applegate, of Detroit, and Dr. Arthur P. Young, of Boston.

Congress Housing Bill Awaits Roosevelt Report

Chairman Lanham, of the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds, yesterday informed Representative Beiter (Democrat), of New York, that no hearings will be held on his bill to authorize a $1,500,000 housing project for members of Congress until the President submits a report on housing conditions in the District.

Lanham pointed out that the information which this commission would furnish would be invaluable in consideration of his proposal.

Hush-Hush Or Health?

District Spends Less on Disease Prevention Than for Syphilis-Crazed Wards in Hospitals

Hospitalization Costs $240,000 Yearly; 10 Per Cent of District's Mentally Diseased Owe Plight to Dreaded Venereal Malady.

(This article is the second of of a series to acquaint citizens with the tragic neglect of the venereal disease problem in the District of Columbia.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

A few days before he died, Dr. William A. White, superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, estimated to this reporter that 10 to 12 per cent of the more than 6,000 mentally diseased patients in his care owe their plight to syphilis.

As of February 28, the total number of inmates for whom the District government is footing the bill was 3,668, or well over half the institution's population. Local taxpayers pay $1.80 a day per patient for their keep.

If Dr. White's 10 per cent estimate applies to these 3,668 municipal wards—and it is perfectly safe to assume it does—then it is evident that the syphilis-crazed are tapping the Capital coffers for $660 a day, or $240,000 a year.

To put it another way, the Nation's Capital is budgeting far more money to board and treat its spirochete-insane in St. Elizabeths than for attention to its thousands of venereal disease sufferers who are prospective candidates for the institution on Congress Heights.

Unlike gonorrhea, the history of syphilis is quite recent as preventable infectious diseases go. The former has been recognized in Europe since classical times, while the other does not come into focus until the late fifteenth century.

Sir D'Arcy Power, London syphilologist and author, is among those who believe the "great pox" has New World origins and was introduced on the continent by Christopher Columbus' sailors returning from the second voyage of discovery. Earlier it was unknown in Europe or Africa.

Pinzen, one of Columbus' captains, is thought to have been infected when he put his vessel into the French port of Bayonne in 1493 after having been driven northward off his course. Ruy Diaz de Isla, fifteenth century Barcelona surgeon, wrote that "a disease previously unknown, unseen and undescribed first appeared in that city (Bayonne) in 1493 and spread thence over the world."

The arrival of this unwelcome guest caused widespread consternation. The French called it a Neapolitan disease, the Italians labeled it French pox. Eventually the term "great pox" came into use, then syphilis, from the Latin poem by Fracastro, "Syphilis sive Morbus Gallicus," published in 1530.

More than three centuries passed before the causes of syphilis and gonorrhea were classified properly and finally. Before Hunter, Carmichael, Ricord, Bassereau, Clerc, Neisser and Ducrey gradually established the fact that the two diseases are caused by different germs, it had been thought the same agent was responsible for both.

If the patient had chancres, or sores, he was suffering from gonorrhea maligna. If there were no sores, but a gleet, his case was diagnosed as gonorrhea benigna. But the same poison was to blame.

The earliest skeptic of note was John Hunter. He suspected there were two separate and distinct diseases, not just one which asserted itself in different ways depending on the constitution of the host. On a May Friday in 1767, Hunter inoculated himself with matter taken from a gonorrhea-infected person.

"The patient, as is now clear to us, also had syphilis," writes Sir D'Arcy Power. "Hunter contracted the disease, wrecked his own life, and the weight of his authority maintaned that syphilis and gonorrhea were due to a single virus. The experiment threw back in England for many years the knowledge and treatment of both diseases and led to the initial lesion being called the Hunterian or indurated sore."

It took a bacteriologist to settle the argument. In 1879, Albert Neisser, of Breslau, demonstrated conclusively the existence of a diplococcus whose characteristics were such as to pin on it the blame for gonorrhea. The discoverer is known today as "the father of the gonoccus."

On March 3, 1905, Fritz Schaudinn, a bacteriologist in the Berlin Health Institute, received the thrill of his life. Peering through his microscope to examine a specimen taken from a hard sore on the body of a 25-year-old woman, Schaudinn noted a queer, spiral shaped organism such as he had never seen before.

He called out to his assistant, Paul Erich Hoffmann, who was treating for syphilis the woman troubled with the sore in question.

The germ that had killed and crippled millions since Columbus' day, the real Public Enemy No. 1, which dies almost immediately after being brought into the open but can live and multiply for 50 years in the bloodstreams was finally brought to bay. It was named Spirochaeta pallida.

Other laboratory developments followed in rapid order. Landsteiner invented the dark field microscope, an invaluable diagnostic aid. Jules Bordet developed the blood test for syphilis, subsequently modified by August von Wassermann. Noguchi showed that the spirochete is present in the paretic's brain, a momentous finding that proved the bug's influence as a wrecker of the central nervous system.

From the standpoint of treatment, the most important discovery in the history of syphilis occurred in 1909 when Paul Ehrlich, who had labored long and perseveringly to find a "specific," gave salvarsan to the world. The arsenic compound, also known as arsphenamine and "606" (it was Ehrlich's 606th attempt in his series of chemical trials), took the place which mercury had held for more than 400 years as the sole remedy for the great pox.

Three years later, Ehrlich introduced "914," caller neosalvarsan or neoarsphenamine, which probably is in greater use today than its predecessor, practitioners being divided over their relative all-round merits.

The administration of bismuth compound as a supplement to arsenicals was adopted about the time of the World War. Malarial therapy of neurosyphilis-paresis and locomotor ataxia—was begun 20 years ago.

Gonorrhea, which is a stubborn catarrah of the genito-urinary mucous membranes, is treated symptomatically. That is to say, by irrigation of the affected parts and other local means.

The arsenicals of Ehrlich, which kill the spirochete without injuring the germ's unwilling host, constitute a specific cure. Unfortunately, no specific cure has been developed as yet for gonorrhea, which experts estimate to be three to four times as prevalent as syphilis.

Looking backward, it is a sad commentary upon a quixotic civilization that the first third of a century which has yielded more light on the cause and cure of syphilis than all the others that went before has produced no material change in public attitude.

The monkey philosophy of see, hear and speak no syphilis, or gonorrhea, has resulted in physicians actually refusing to tell their patients they are infected, lawmakers spurning appeals for funds to combat the menace, philanthropists neglecting venereal disease enterprises while showering their gold upon other projects which, though worthy, are relatively inferior.

What is Washington doing about it?

An answer to this question will be offered in Mr. Gross' article Wednesday.

Social Security Decision Seen In Court Action

Law to Be Reviewed, Pronouncement Expected Before Session Ends.

By the Associated Press.

A major pronouncement by the Supreme Court on social security legislation appeared to be assured as the result of the court's decision yesterday to review a legal quarrel over an Alabama statute.

The Alabama law, enacted to supplement the Federal social security law, provides for unemployment insurance.

The high tribunal already has upheld by a 4-to-4 vote, but without a written opinion, a similar New York law. The evenly-divided vote was due to the absence of Justice Stone, who since has recovered from an extended illness.

A petition for reconsideration of the 4-to-4 decision has been pending since December 14, some observers pointed out today, after the tribunal had agreed to pass on the Alabama law, that action on the reconsideration request might be held up until the Alabama case had been decided by written opinion.

Arguments on the Alabama law probably will be heard during the week of April 5. A final decision is expected before the court adjourns in June for the summer. A three-judge Federal District Court in Alabama declared the law unconstitutional and enjoined its enforcement against the Southern Coal & Coke Co.

The Supreme Court handed down no opinions yesterday. It delayed until at least next Monday decisions on Constitutionality of the Wagner Labor Relations act and the Washington law establishing minimum wages for women.

In other actions, the justices:

1. Denied an appeal by Halsted L. Ritter, removed as Florida Federal District judge after a Senate impeachment trial.

2. Refused to review litigation by stockholders of the Detroit Bankers Company, who sought to escape paying a $25,000,000 assessment upon stock in the First National Bank, Detroit.

ers to issue similar instructions to their employes. A careful check, Hazen said, will be made on employes of the District government who drive automobiles.

Favors Assailed.

And at the same time, Hazen condemned practices of motorists who seek "special privileges" in efforts to avoid punishment for offenses. He cited the case of a wealthy Washington society matron who recently was arrested on a charge of hit-and-run.

This woman, it was reported, struck another car and sped away. Occupants of the other machine hailed a police car and gave chase. The offender was overtaken and immediately offered to "settle everything."

She was accused of leaving the scene of an accident, however, and ordered to appear in court.

Yesterday a city official was asked to "quash" the charges. He refused, ordering the woman to appear and receive punishment.

"This sort of thing is one of our worst problems," said Hazen. "I am not opposed to adjusting matters when a worthy case is presented. I do, however, condemn the 'special privilege' class of person who willfully violates the law and then asks for leniency."

Negligence and reckless driving on Washington streets during the past year have destroyed more than 4,400 trees and treeboxes along the curbs, according to Traffic Department figures revealed yesterday.

Tree Planting Climbs.

Clifford Lanham, superintendent of trees and parks, said an average of 3,000 new trees are planted in Washington each year. His figures show it was necessary to plant 7,000 new sprouts last year.

Washington's proposed traffic school, to be inaugurated early in April, received its first applicant yesterday. William J. Keefe, 2816 Sixth street northeast, asked to enroll for the first term.

The school, first of its kind in Washington, will instruct not only in the operation of automobiles, but will offer a course in traffic safety. Police and traffic officials will act as instructors.

Meanwhile, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, is studying a plan to "ticket" pedestrians who violate walking rules.

Neither Maj. Brown nor the Commissioners would comment on the proposal yesterday pending further study.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer also is preparing a pedestrian control program. His plan, however, will also include the motorist in a campaign against "traffic cheaters."

Major Problem.

"One of our major problems," Van Duzer said, "is the motorist or pedestrian who attempts to 'beat the light' when crossing intersections. We plan rigid enforcement of right-of-way rules."

City officials, both civic and governmental, are making plans to receive Lieut. Franklin Kreml, Evanston, Ill., police officer who was awarded $5,000 by the C. I. T. Safety foundation for outstanding traffic safety work last year.

Lieut. Kreml will be guest of honor at a dinner sponsored by The Washington Post. The date of his arrival has not been set.

Stewart Johnson, 66, of 4331 Forty-fourth street northwest, died in Gallinger Hospital yesterday apparently suffered from injuries in an automobile accident two weeks ago at Sixth street and Constitution avenue northwest. An autopsy will be performed to determine if he was the thirty-third traffic victim of the year. Johnson was taken to his home after the accident and was not removed to the hospital until late yesterday. He died there about an hour after arrival.

Struck by a truck at Jefferson and M streets northwest, Phillip Cole, 17-year-old bicyclist, of 1326 Thirty-fourth street northwest, suffered internal injuries and shock. His condition was said to be serious at Georgetown Hospital.

According to police, the youth was riding a bicycle when he collided with a truck operated by Everett Brown, 23, 906 D street southwest. Brown was not held.

Lewis Haiss, 21, 484 I street southwest, suffered a broken ankle and cuts when he was knocked off his motorcycle by an automobile at Ninth street and Rhode Island avenue northwest. He was taken to emergency Hospital.

Police arrested Lawrence A. Hawkins, colored, 18, Bowie, Md., and charged him with reckless driving.

LOVELY PRIMA DONNA OF METROPOLITAN OPERA SAYS:

"A season of opera and concert means my voice and throat must be consistently in perfect condition. Therefore, although most of my smoking is done while I am on vacation, it is all important to me that I be careful in choosing my cigarette. I smoke Luckies because I enjoy their taste and because I feel it is wiser for me to choose a light smoke for my voice."

Helen Jepson

An independent survey was made recently among professional men and women—lawyers, doctors, lecturers, scientists, etc. Of those who said they smoke cigarettes, more than 87% stated they personally prefer a light smoke.

Miss Jepson verifies the wisdom of this preference, and so do other leading artists of the radio, stage, screen and opera. Their voices are their fortunes. That's why so many of them smoke Luckies. You, too, can have the throat protection of Luckies—a light smoke, free of certain harsh irritants removed by the exclusive process "It's Toasted". Luckies are gentle on the throat.

Miller Indicted For 1st-Degree Murder of Girl

Trial Is Expected Early in April; Midwife Will Be Questioned.

Charlottesville, Va., March 8.—A week after the chloroform murder of Cleo Sprouse, 18-year-old high school student of this historic university town, the grand jury of Albemarle County today returned an indictment of first-degree murder against Dr. Richard G. Miller, prominent local dentist.

Judge Lemuel F. Smith is expected to announce March 29 that Dr. Miller will be tried early in April.

Dr. Miller, now in jail at Richmond, has confessed that the girl, his patient, died of chloroform while he was preparing to perform an illegal operation on her.

The grand jury, composed of five men, was called into a special session today by Commonwealth's Attorney W. O. Fife. It deliberated only an hour before returning the indictment.

Fife explained that all unlawful slayings in Virginia are presumed to be murder in the second degree. The burden, he said, rests on the prosecution to raise that to the first degree and to the defence to reduce it.

The body of Cleo Sprouse, with a can of chloroform and cotton and a towel over the mouth, was found on the edge of the University of Virginia Cemetery a week ago tomorrow. The following day Dr. Miller was arrested in his dental office and taken to the City Hall Jail. After a noisy crowd of 1,000 gathered outside the jail late that night, he was hurried to the Henrico County Jail in Richmond.

En route, according to Sheriff J. Mason Smith, he told how the girl died off the Stony Point road, six miles from Charlottesville, while he was preparing to do the operation, and how, later, he deposited the body outside the cemetery.

Sheriff Smith revealed later that Dr. Miller denied he was responsible for the girl's condition. He quoted the dentist as saying the girl told him the name of a sweetheart responsible for her condition, but that it was not familiar to him and he had forgotten it.

Commonwealth's Attorney Fife has said consistently he did not believe Dr. Miller's confession in its entirety, and he presumably so told the grand jury today before it returned its indictment of first-degree murder.

The four attorneys retained for Dr. Miller plan to confer with him and map out defense strategy Wednesday. An insanity plea is among the possibilities being considered. About four months ago, Dr. Miller was hunting wild turkeys when his shotgun discharged accidentally. He suffered a wound in the head and had been complaining of severe headaches since.

The defense attorneys are E. V. Walker and his partner, Robert Taylor, and Commonwealth's Attorney Harold M. Ratcliffe, of Henrico County, and Leith Bremner, of Richmond.

John Minor Maury, jr., assistant to Fife, has announced that a midwife living near Charlottesville will be questioned in the case.

Schwartz Estate Set at $150,000

In a petition filed in the District Court yesterday it was disclosed that the late Charles Schwartz, local jeweler, who died in February in Miami, left an estate of about $150,000. This was learned when a petition for the probate of his will was filed yesterday.

His widow, Mrs. Dora K. Schwartz, 2419 California streetnorthwest, is to receive the bulk of the estate, which is to be held in trust for her. Upon her death the estate is to be turned over to the jeweler's son, Samuel T. Schwartz, and Eugenia T. Schwartz, who in the meantime are to act as trustees.

The deceased's interest in the jewelry business was valued at $25,000. He made bequests of $500 each to the Hebrew Home for the Aged, the Jewish Foster Home and the Jewish Consumptive Relief Association. Mrs. Dora Schwartz was given $5,000 in cash besides the interest in the trust estate.

Japan Extends Good-Neighbor Policy to China

Territorial Expansion Plan Is Abandoned by New Premier.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 8.—Japan, seeking to court the favor of Great Britain and bolster her economic position, renounced territorial ambitions in China today and extended to her neighbor an offer of friendly dealings on a basis of equality.

Taking cognizance of suspicious watching by China, where extreme elements have demanded war against Japan, and economic clashes with other nations, Foreign Minister Naotake Sato enunciated this policy in his inaugural address to Parliament:

"A fresh start on the basis of equality" in dealing with China.

Economic friendliness, to permit Japanese trade expansion.

Reassurance to other world powers, particularly Britain, who have watched Japanese development in North China with growing concern.

No Territorial Ambitions.

"Japan has no territorial ambitions in China," Sato told cheering legislators.

"Japan respects Chinese interests and wishes to shake hands with them economically. That is the only way Japan can expand there.

"We must do something definite to improve our present unfavorable relations with China, which are highly disadvantageous to both countries."

The former policy of infiltration has failed, he continued, and aroused other world powers to anxious watch.

"Recently," he cited, as an example, "Japan has clashed with British economic and trade interests in China. It is unwise for Japan to cause anxiety to other powers with interests in China and it will be best for Japan to follow a peaceful course of co-operating with other nations."

Strikes at Communism.

Brushing over the matter of Russia, frequently the subject of Japanese criticism, Sato said only that relations between the two nations would be greatly improved if the Communist Internationale were eliminated. (Japan and Germany have an accord against the Communist Internationale.)

Following his address, the House of Representatives formally approved the revised budget, of $788,300,000, more than half of which was alloted to the army and navy.

The budget now goes to the upper house.

Sato's presentation of Japanese foreign policy under his administration was almost a complete reversal of that of his predecessors.

Since long before the Japanese army aided Manchukuo in setting up its vast state in 1931, independent of the regime of Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Japanese have discussed the desire of expanding their domination of North China.

Texas Oil Firm Asks Permit to Drill at Sea

Galveston, Tex., March 8 (AP).—The Humble Oil & Refining Co. wants to drill an oil well a mile out in the Gulf of Mexico.

Notices of a hearing on a request to construct an oil derrick in the Gulf about a mile off shore 33 miles east of Galveston were distributed today by Capt. Charles F. Baish, of the United States District engineer's Office. The hearing, set for March 19, is to determine the effects of the proposed derrick on navigation.

TELEPHONE NATIONAL 4200.

A Two-Edged Sword.

In considering steps toward nationalization of the shipbuilding and arms industries the Senate Munitions Committee is inclined to emphasize the imperative character of national defense. The Navy was recently embarrassed by its inability to obtain steel for warship construction. If private firms "persist in refusal to meet labor standards such as are required in the Walsh-Healey act," says Senator Nye, "then they must realize the Government is prepared to go into any manufacturing line necessary to meet its needs."

So far as the Navy program is concerned the Munitions Committee's proposal is rather belated. Leading steel companies are already introducing the 40-hour week required of bidders on major governmental contracts. Further difficulty in obtaining steel for the Navy's ships is not anticipated under the present law.

This fortunate solution of the Navy's problem emphasizes the desirability of analyzing the Nye plan as a permanent means of avoiding delay in governmental projects. It is well to note that the principle laid down applies to any line of manufacturing to meet the Government's needs. Under this policy the Federal departments would presumably undertake to supply their own wants, from roll-top desks to shoes to rest on them, whenever essential materials could not be obtained from private companies maintaining the prescribed labor standards.

Obviously such wide-scale socialization would be of vital importance to labor as well as management. It would guarantee to labor certain minimum standards. But by the same token it would rob trade unionism of the right of independent action, if not of actual existence. When the Munitions Committee favors nationalization to end employer obstruction it is to be presumed that it will for the same reason demand legislation making strikes in Government plants a reasonable offense.

Five Dears Plan.

Obviously one of the troubles with Dr. Townsend is that he started at the wrong end. His beneficent paternalism would apply only to citizens who have reached the age, if not the status, of grandparents.

Canada, also, made a false start with Premier Aberhart of Alberta. But Welfare Minister Croll of Ontario has redeemed this flop handsomely. Asking leave of the provincial legislature to retire as guardian of the Dionne quintuplets, he modestly announces that their trust fund now amounts to $543,046.39, to say nothing of contracts.

The Townsend proposal was to neglect production, emphasize consumption and benefit primarily the older generation. Mr. Croll's Ontario plan, on the other hand, started on the basis of phenomenal production, dealt with the youngest citizens available, and was concerned with no problems of consumption that a nursing bottle could not solve.

Mr. Croll considers his job as director of the Five Dears Plan about over, and wants to return to his normal duties. His success, and his willingness to retire thereafter, may lead someone to propose general application of his version of paternalism, which, at a half million dollars per family, makes pikers of Dr. Townsend and Premier Aberhart. Moreover, any such proposal would surely win the unanimous support of the Prospective Fathers' Bloc.

Dr. William A. White.

A leader in modern methods of psychiatric care and a first citizen of Washington was lost to the community when Dr. William A. White died. For nearly 34 years he had been superintendent of St. Elizabeths, the Government hospital for the insane. Under his direction, it became a Federal institution where science and efficiency completely displaced politics and indifference. The city, too, gained by an integrity and competency which served as an inspiration for professional men and laymen alike.

Dr. White's reputation, however, was by no means confined to the Capital area or, indeed, to the United States. Its scope was indicated by his election in 1930 to the presidency of the International Congress on Mental Hygiene. He travelled broadly, sharing at all stops his forward-looking attitude on mental disorders. And his name and ideas were spread through his writings, particularly his "Outlines of Psychiatry," one of the most widely read of all treatises on the subject.

A sample of Dr. White's progressiveness is to be found in the fact that he was the first in this country to sanction the use of malaria in the treatment of general paresis. Similarly, one of his first orders on taking charge at St. Elizabeths was for the elimination of strait-jackets, padded cells and other barbarous devices then in common use for the control of unbalanced persons. Leadership of this sort in the dark field of mental disease will be sorely missed.

The Appeal To Reason.

No profound intelligence is required to realize that civilization is in a period which places reason, and a rational approach to social progress, at a disadvantage.

The possibility of achieving an unprecedentedly high degree of social welfare is greater than ever before. But so also is the possibility of cataclysmic retrogression. Never has there been a time when the need for discriminating leadership was greater. And as criticism of irrational policies survives only in the democratic countries, an especially heavy responsibility for the preservation of rational conduct rests upon the President of the United States.

Thus there would be more than ordinary cause for alarm should Mr. Roosevelt, in his "fireside talk" tonight, continue the technique of last Thursday's broadcast by making an emotional appeal to those groups who rightly resent their economic disadvantage. Demagogy is never admirable. Its effects are particularly deplorable at a time when constructive intelligence must painfully make its way through a maze of high-pressure propagandizing.

One of the most disturbing observations in the President's "Victory Dinner" speech was his statement that "some of our supporters . . . were worried by the evil symptom that the propaganda and the epithets of last summer and fall had died down." To the rational mind it would seem a most healthy sign that the eighteen million voters who cast ballots against Mr. Roosevelt were so generally disposed to accept his sweeping victory in good part. How any responsible person could regard this as an "evil symptom" is incomprehensible.

Of course the President has a case in his effort to solve modern problems within the body of our Eighteenth Century Constitution. But he will undermine that case with all thinking Americans if he chooses to press it either deceptively, as he did in his message of February 5, or demagogically, as in his broadcast of March 4. The greater the issue before a democracy, the more vital that it be presented by its leaders in the most honest and unimpassioned manner. A settlement based on any other appraisal would be no settlement, but a preliminary to disaster.

On the whole, the opponents of Mr. Roosevelt's court-enlargement proposal are keeping their side of the argument on a high plane of rational and analytical discussion. It cannot be said that the proponents are doing the same. There is everywhere an uncomfortable feeling that the plan was not fairly presented in the first place, and that emotional methods are now going to be employed in a determined effort to force it through.

Tonight the President has opportunity to disarm these suspicions. He can prove to his friends and well-wishers, as well as to his enemies, that he had no desire to dodge the appeal to reason. He can let it be understood that if one way of solving national problems is rationally inadmissible, other procedures remain. He can, implicitly as well as explicitly, renounce the technique which is routine with Hitler and Mussolini and by that token unacceptable here.

That is the way in which Mr. Roosevelt can show himself representative not merely of all Americans "who have faith in political and economic and social democracy," but also of that large element among them who realize that by demagogy is democracy most easily overthrown.

Interstate Co-operation.

The growth of interstate co-operation is a significant development, indicating that a way has been found to solve a good many regulatory problems without the intervention of the Federal Government.

In some cases, indeed, such co-operation is much more effective and better adapted to local requirements than any uniform Federal law could possibly be. That is true, for instance, of interstate efforts to deal with flood control, pollution, drainage and other matters in certain well-defined areas such as the Delaware and Ohio River basins. Eleven States are represented on two commissions considering problems of common concern to the people of these regions.

Of special interest, however, from the viewpoint of those who are seeking for a middle ground between State and Federal regulation, are the increasing efforts to further interstate co-operation in such fields as liquor control, insurance, banking, tax agreements, labor compacts, relief, etc. At the present time 17 States have commissions working with the Council of State Governments on these problems, whereas only two similar commissions were in existence two years ago. Furthermore, it is believed that quite a number of State Legislatures will shortly pass bills providing for interstate co-operation.

While interstate agreements and the adoption of uniform regulatory laws are no substitute for Nation-wide uniformity in all cases, there are many instances in which such joint action seems to be the ideal approach to localize undertakings which individual States cannot handle effectively. The best proof of that is found in the action of the States themselves. They would not manifest such eagerness to create machinery facilitating interstate co-operation if they had not gained new insight into the potentialities of joint action as an alternative to Federal intervention.

Functioning Under Fire.

Throughout the controversy over President Roosevelt's judiciary bill no word of comment has been heard from any justice of the Supreme Court. None was, or is, expected. Regardless of how bitterly or unfairly the court may be assailed, its members are not in a position to defend themselves. As the Nation's chief judicial servants, the nine justices must necessarily keep aloof from non-judicial controversies, even when their own honor is impunged.

Nevertheless the court cannot possibly remain unaffected by the dispute over its future status. There is good reason to believe that at least one decision has already been delayed because of the tumult precipitated by the President's proposal. Arguments on the highly controversial case involving Washington State's minimum wage law for women were presented to the court nearly three months ago. The litigants are still waiting for a decision.

A case challenging the validity of the Wagner labor act has been under advisement for 26 days. Since this week will be devoted to hearings, and since the court will recess next Monday for two weeks, this decision is likely to be postponed until March 29, or later. Here is at least a suggestion that controversial opinions are being delayed to avoid adding fuel to a spreading conflagration.

In his broadcast of March 4 the President declared himself unwilling to risk "postponing one moment beyond absolute necessity the time when we can free from legal doubt those policies which offer a progressive solution of our problems." But the very method by which he proposes to clear away these legal doubts seems to have lengthened the period of uncertainty of which he complains.

If the Supreme Court is deliberately withholding decisions, it cannot be blamed. No judicial body can function properly under political attack. If this tribunal hands down an opinion favorable to the New Deal, it will be accused of yielding to intimidation. If its conclusions are adverse to the New Deal, the assault upon "defeatist lawyers" will be renewed with increased venom. In either event the prestige of the court would be certain to suffer.

This handicap upon the court would not be so serious if it should prove to be only temporary. But if its membership should be enlarged for the express purpose of influencing its decisions, all reputation for independent judgment would be shattered. It would pass under a cloud of suspicion which would vitally affect the prestige of an organ essential to a federal form of government.

Change And Decay.

As inevitably happens to most old buildings in the heart of a growing city, wreckers will before long start demolition of the Friends Meeting House and school on I street. On the site will rise a new general hospital. With this, a neighborhood that once boasted some of Washington's finest residences will complete a transformation begun a quarter of a century ago when physicians first started clustering their offices there.

The change is entirely natural. What the city has lost in architectural appeal it has gained in a convenient and well-integrated medical community, now to be crowned with hospital facilities. Moreover, the famous old school will be much more happily located in some spacious suburban area, presumably at the site on Wisconsin avenue where the junior department has been functioning for several years.

The passing of these colorful red-brick buildings, however, makes a nearby transition to modernity the more regrettable. Truly appreciative city planning would have endeavored to keep Lafayette Square unviolated, in keeping with its Old World aspect and the noble simplicity of the adjacent White House. There was sufficient space elsewhere for the masses of limestone which are too characteristic of post-war Washington. What's done is done. But it may be hoped now that the few remaining old buildings on the square will be left alone, to preserve for future generations a faint flavor of its former charm.

It is as possible as it would be ironic that a decade or so hence we shall have a movement to "restore" Lafayette Square to its earlier simplicity, as has been done at Williamsburg and is now to be started at St. Augustine.

End Of Social Credit?

From The St. Louis Star-Times.

Premier William Aberhart, of Alberta, who in 1935 was carried into office on his hotly debated Social Credit platform, has proclaimed the idea a failure for the 13-month period in which it has been tried, and has asked his constituents to decide whether he shall retain office or resign. Social Credit itself, he maintains, is the coming economic thing, but it will take time to perfect—considerably longer than 18 months, anyway. There will be less surprise at the plan's failure than at the premier's frank admission of defeat.

The prime minister blames failure on adverse economic and agricultural conditions in 1936 and on opposition from financial interests. There was more to it than that—an unworkable method of financing the scheme, the violent unconformity of Social Credit to the rest of the Canadian economic system and numerous minor factors. The Social Credit party was sincerely concerned with providing economic security and comfort to everyone. That can be worked out without erecting an elaborate system of gadgets aimed at conjuring up Utopia.

Revolution's Result.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: History repeats itself. The "Reign of Terror" following the French Revolution wiped out all possible beneficial results which the revolution might have effected. Instead reaction was once more entrenched as a result of the "Terror." Today Russia is following in France's footsteps. The whole world looks on in horror at this new outbreak of atavism. It is atavism, not socialism.

Alexis Rykoff, former president of the council, and Nickolai Bukharin, former editor of Izvestia, are the latest victims of the modern Inquisition. This is the third recent "purge" of the party. All that is needed is to point the finger of suspicion at any of the "old Bolsheviks" and they are speedily convicted. Right now, I can see their heads under the guillotine. They are guilty even before they are tried. Thus does the suspicious Slavic brooding spirit see treason lurking behind every bush.

Millions cannot be raised from barbarism to civilization by barbaric methods and a couple of "Five Year Plans."

Emma Goldman for years in America was persecuted and harried from city to city for preaching the doctrines now supposed to be dominant in the Land of the Czars. I do not believe in Emma Goldman's teachings, but most people give her credit for sincerity, mistaken though it may be. When she sought asylum in Russia, having been deported from "capitalistic" America on the Buford, she was treated even worse there than in America. She was put in the same category as the "bad capitalists," despite the fact that all her life she had fought and sacrificed for proletarian principles. She was penniless and in poor health. But she, too, like Big Bill Haywood, became a victim to the "correct ideology." Emma told all about this in the American Mercury magazine some time ago.

Liberals are fast turning away from Russia in nausea at this new Salem witchcraft epidemic. It is a disease. Violent revolutions always defeat real progress.

Overindulgent Drinking.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The comments in your column in regard to women drinking excessively has aroused considerable comment. Assisting slightly hilarious or completely inebriated women from hotels or night clubs is so prevalent it has ceased to cause much consternation.

Laws are enacted, hoping they will have the effect of improving public morals. Excessive drinking cannot be regulated by legislation. People drink according to their own code of moral living. Therefore, prohibition or repeal is not responsible for drinking. Our habits are the direct expression of innate desires and appetites. If a person has a penchant to join the bibulous crowd, laws forbidding or permitting drinking cannot be blamed. It is a manifestation of individual character.

The recent figures showing the tremendous increase in the consumption of alcoholic beverages is an axiom that drinking is not on the decrease, and, manifestly, women do their share.

This pernicious overindulgence has done irreparable damage to the bulwark of our Nation—the American home.

Trite And Inane English.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Charles L. Carhart, a lover of good English, has recommended in these columns a fine for barbarisms. May I suggest as a candidate for such a fine the particularly pernicious, because so tenacious piece of barbarity and inanity, "The best of any." For examples of its use I refer you to many of those presumably well trained in the English language.

Then, too, it would seem the time has come to use drastic measures to discourage those trite expressions: "common or garden variety" and that other one about not being able "to see the woods for the trees."

American Architecture.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The letter of your correspondent, Charles H. Probert, headed "Classical Architecture in 1937," which was printed in a recent issue of The Post in connection with readers' comment upon the projected Jefferson Memorial, was interesting. It contained authoritative information of true value, not only on sources of our architecture, but also on that nebulous field, the mysterious development of qualities which have been expressed in social usages, language, government and architecture linking the American people to ancient Rome.

I would like The Post to grant me a similar consideration to enable me to take up at least the point in Mr. Probert's letter regarding the absence of any typically American style of architecture.

There stands in a little suburb of Chicago, the town of Wilmette, Ill., a unique edifice. It is a mysterious and beautiful temple not unlike the Taj Mahal, but a modern version. It is a nonagon form of structure (nine-sided). It is partially covered with a rich and mature type of decorative detail formed with concrete and crushed quartz. It is glass inclosed underneath the beautiful outer detail. This structure is to be used as a universal house of worship by all races and religious sects.

The temple as it stands is a bold and challenging modern version of the art of temple building as it is known in the Orient. It was designed by the late Louis Bourgeois, a Frenchman of outstanding character and achievement in American architecture.

Now, strange to say, this style of architecture I am pleased to call typically American and to support this belief I can point to a primitive effort like it in no other building than the Capitol. I believe it is the rotunda section and I want to call particular attention to the great columns in this section with their peculiar design in relief at the top. The technique is, strangely enough, of the same bold, challenging kind as appears in the designs of the Baha'i Temple of Louis Bourgeois. Also I have seen this same technique which really affords a symbolic reference to the seeker or student in modern designs appearing in that temple of modernism in New York City, the Town House, with which structure your correspondent was associated.

In America it is something new and challenging that is sought for, I believe, and thus far it appears in only these two places mentioned.

The Democratic Way.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The President's assault on the Supreme Court is not easy to square with candor and good faith.

Mr. Roosevelt and his Attorney General say the hostility to the judiciary is necessary to save democracy. It is just the opposite. The word democracy is of Greek derivation. It means government by the people.

But the court attack tries to trick and circumvent the people. The Supreme Court was created by the Nation. It belongs to the people, not to the President. The people alone have the right to emasculate the highest court. But the President kept the issue from the people in the election.

Submission to the voters would be the democratic way of settling so great a question. But that the President dared not do. Many apprehended that he had secret designs against the judiciary. He was urged to disclose his purposes, that voters might register their wishes at the ballot box. But he dared not do so. He seems to have felt that if his designs were known voters would annihilate him.

He talks in generalities in favor of democracy, but he dares not practice it. An issue so momentous as he now raises concerns all the people. He should have let them pass on it. That would have been real democracy. He chose instead to make his attack on the court from ambush. No budding dictator trusts the people. The President obviously knew, and knows now, that the people do not favor his wish to destroy the high integrity of the Supreme Court. To call his political ambuscade democracy does not make it so.

GILBERT O. NATIONS.
Washington, March 6.

"Let's Go To Bat."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Constitution of the United States is as sacred to the American people as the Ten Commandments, the sanctity of both of which is gradually being destroyed, not by the will of the people directly, but through a medium.

If the 27,000,000 who voted for Roosevelt want a change in our form of government let them place themselves on record and take the responsibility. They did not vote for the Townsend old-age pension, the Browder socialistic scheme, or for Roosevelt's repudiation of the Constitution.

Oratory is good on both sides, but a waste of time and money and nothing gained, as in the last election. Give us the issue and let's go to bat.

Quezon's New Gavel.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Manuel L. Quezon has a new autographed gavel, given him by Speaker William B. Bankhead.

We hope that, although the power behind President Quezon's new gavel may not be heard in the great dome of the Capitol, Speaker Bankhead and his distinguished colleagues will consider the Philippines seriously and give the Filipinos a good hearing and a square deal.

If they do, the Philippines will undoubtedly find herself blessed with peace in the light of democracy. Then, being assured of our economic progress under the aegis of reciprocal free trade, we have every reason to cherish the true friendship we have cemented with the American people during the last 37 years.

To Help The Farmer.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: President Roosevelt has rendered the country a valuable service in calling attention to the ominous increase in farm tenantry, but the relief which he suggests would aggravate rather than correct the evil. Lending public money to farmers at less than normal interest rates is not fair to the public.

In fact, no special privilege of any kind should be given to agriculture any more than it should be given to taxi drivers or shopgirls. Every vocation has its advantages and disadvantages and it is not a proper function of government to play the part of philanthropist with any class with money belonging to all others.

The legitimate way to help the farmer without injustice to other taxpayers is by the Single Tax system, to remove the two great evils which are a blight on agriculture today. The first of these is the artificially high price of the land used by the farmer. This has the direct effect of compelling loans with a crushing burden of interest payments. The land is the gift of God without price.

The second evil is that which is borne by everyone, an unscientific system of taxation which penalizes industry and thrift and rewards special privilege. It is interesting to observe that where 70 per cent of all farms are operated by tenants, then when the Government pays a hundred million dollars as a reward for not raising crops, landlords get about one-third of the $70,000,000 or more than $23,000,000. This is an inequity which should cease.

The Post Impressionist

"Victime Expiatoire."

IN CLEARING out a library shelf the other day, I came across a French novel that I had intended to write about when it first came to attention but which, for one reason or another, had been pushed into the background of neglected things and memories.

A glance at the cover of the exhumed "Victime Expiatoire" was sufficient to resuscitate the first impression in all its vividness and a re-reading brought the conviction that it really was worth the primary trouble involved in writing a review, to say nothing of the secondary and more annoying one of trying to get some editor to agree with me.

• • • •

"Victime Expiatoire" was written by Andre Corthis in 1926 and was published for the first time by Artheme Fayard et Cie, Paris. It was an addition to their "Livres de Demain."

• • • •

The book is one of those curiously indeterminate books that belong partly to the literature of crime and mystery and partly to the realm of psychology. It is easy to grope around in memory and name at random a dozen more or less recent French works of related nature—Beraud's "Lazare" and "Vitriol de Lune;" Pierre Frondaie's "L'Homme a l'Hispano." Jules Romaine's "Lucienne," some of the stories of Jacques de Lacratelle, Maupassant, Barbusse and so on.

If Corthis in his present romance has not produced a thing as subtly beautiful and tender as his "Pour moi Seule"—"For Me Alone," translated by Frederick Taber Cooper (Stokes, 1921)—he has nevertheless another admirable achievement to his credit.

The scene is the French mining region near the Spanish border, and, while the author's means of creating his impression is rather obvious and at times deliberately contrived, the effect is, for all that, so convincing that the wild desolation of the locality, the lawlessness and brutality of its inhabitants, is almost as oppressive as if it were a personal, living experience.

Corthis knows how, with a stroke, to evoke the underlying spirit, the mysterious suggestions and inferences, of a landscape. A more superficial writer might have chosen a "paysage intime et charmant" as a setting in order to emphasize his climax by the contrast of natural beauty with human iniquity. This method had no allure for him whatever. His story starts and ends in a land of frightful contours, monstrous colors and black abysses—a land that seems the very dwelling place of evil.

• • • •

To this place have come a Spanish schoolmaster, Don Augustin, and his daughter, Santa. An atmosphere of mystery envelops them and it is not until the novel is well under way that one learns that Don Augustin is sacrificing his daughter in expiation of an act of his own.

Years before he had caused the death of his second wife at the bidding of an impulse that told him that, in marrying her, he had sinned against the great and fundamental love he bore his daughter. His one crazy notion is to make her share the penalty and to increase his own self-torture by being a constant witness of her wretchedness.

Santa is exposed to insults and indignities at the hands of the brutalized and criminal miners, but finally she meets a young Castilian doctor who has been sent to the mine to take the place temporarily of the regular physician. They fall in love and decide to elope, but Don Augustin discovers the plan and plots the doctor's murder, not by his own hands, but by arousing the mad jealousy of an outlaw whose passion Santa had aroused. The tragedy runs to its terrible climax uncompromisingly and without the slightest deviation in the direction of sentimentality.

The characterizations are adroitly handled. The sketch of the little boy, Jaimato, is done with exquisite delicacy and unforgettable pathos; Santa's transition from the patient, uncomplaining half-dazed martyr to the woman distracted between the ecstasies and agonies of love, is splendidly accomplished and the portraits of the other actors of this intense drama have the ring of authenticity and vitality.

But it is in the analysis of the complex and obscure neurosis that has corroded the soul of the father that, I think, Corthis has had his greatest success. In his uncertainty as to whether he actually did murder his wife, Don Augustin's mental state is rather suggestive of that of Dreiser's Clyde Griffiths after that appalling scene in which Roberta was drowned. Here, however, the idea of guilt has become fixed. Don Augustin does not torture Santa merely for the sake of punishment; his is a sort of mystical cruelty, necessary, he thinks for the salvation of both their souls.

Is the whole thing a symbol of wretchedness caused by parents in the effort to mold the fates of their children; or, in the broader sense, a symbol of the tyranny of the older generation in demanding that the younger pay its spiritual debts, no matter at what cost? To say so would doubtless be far fetched and beside the point. On its face, "Victime Expiatoire" is one of those studies of smouldering passion, of emotional paradoxes and of the antinomies of circumstances which the Latins know how, so effectively, to combine with melodrama.

The volume is illustrated with 27 wood-cuts by Hermann Paul—things of clear beauty both from the executive and interpretative viewpoint.

Nazi Misunderstanding.

THE REAL REASON for the little misunderstanding with the Nazi government is that the Nazis want to impose some of their laws on the United States. This is a common difficulty of the Nazis in their dealings with various nations, but it has never been so violently demonstrated as in the present case arising from Fiorello La Guardia's casual wisecrack about Adolf Hitler.

Speaking directly for Der Fuehrer, one of the German official newspapers then said that in Germany a man in the same position who said the like of that would be slapped into a prison or a lunatic asylum. That is quite true, and entirely reasonable to the Nazi mentality. They do not believe in freedom of speech, but this country does, and the right is guaranteed to all.

The Nazis, however, have a feeling that this freedom should be restricted in regard to remarks about Hitler, and, in their curious state of mind, deem it quite reasonable to insist on a limitation which would mean the abolition of free speech.

The fact that La Guardia criticized the head of a nominally friendly nation is merely a talking point with the Nazis. In the first place, their public officials have said much more insulting things about the Russian government, which is nominally friendly to Germany, and their papers, which are government documents, have spoken very harshly about the American government and the nation as well. Our papers do likewise, but they are not government publications. In the second place, the friendship is only nominal as the Nazis revealed in their furious anger over La Guardia's remark. Their papers, which speak for Hitler, include the whole American nation and its civilization in their insults, which were more helpful than injurious, because they warned Americans of the true feelings of the Nazis toward the United States.

• • • •

LAST YEAR the Nazis tried to change the laws of a Swiss canton to suit their anger when a Nazi organizer, sent into Switzerland to conspire against the peace of a friendly nation, was killed by an assassin.

The Swiss arrested the man and were proceeding to give him a trial according to the laws of the canton, which did not permit capital punishment.

The Nazis set up a furious clamor for an exception in this case and uttered mysterious threats. They wanted the Swiss to hang the man. The Swiss, however, calmly ignored all this and sent the man to prison for life, which was a way of telling Hitler to go roll his hoop.

At this time the Nazis pulled in their necks and changed the subject. The Swiss, in common with other nations, have learned by experience that if they let the Nazi government bull them around there is no limit to the liberties which they will take. On the other hand, if they stand their ground as the Swiss did, the Nazis will take back.

The fact is that if this country should curtail the right of free speech the Nazis who have been sent over here to organize against the internal calm of the United States would be the first to suffer and the first to holler murder.

They would then come under the ban themselves and would not be permitted to hold meetings here in a foreign language to denounce American officials, the American people, American ideals and the American system of government. Their recruiting offices would be closed and their anti-American meetings broken up.

• • • •

THE NAZIS, on the other hand, have certain laws restricting the activities of Americans in Germany which Americans are required to respect. They forbid anti-Nazi meetings and remarks against the regime and almost any document from the Holy Bible to the Racing Form, not sponsored by the government, can be interpreted as seditious literature.

They have thrown Americans into jail for long periods without trial for offenses which would not be illegal at all in this country, and Americans in Germany abide by the law which holds that praise of democracy to the disparagement of dictatorship is criminal.

We think they are crazy and the opinion is mutual and that is all right. The trouble is that they want us to join them cutting out paper dolls.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

What's Wrong With This Picture?

Miami Beach, Fla., March 8.—You can reach a given point here now without losing a front fender, burglaries have declined 10 per cent, the slot machines have been readjusted for slightly better pay-offs, Broadway actors are now down to four or five to a doorway and Florida again has a Florida atmosphere . . . the winter vacation season is over.

• • • •

Night clubs have folded, the world's smuttiest entertainers are gone, the aroma of ham no longer kills the aroma of flowers, girls who don't look like something the surrealists dragged in are in the majority again, the cops are able to take a deep breath once in a while, the newspapers are printing fewer pictures of plumbing supply agents and their wives trying to look happy at $25 per day, and a glass of orange juice is back within the reach of the masses . . . Briefly, Miami begins to look as good as the circulars say.

• • • •

Not an automobile has driven off a causeway in almost 48 hours!

• • • •

(Correction: 36 hours!)

• • • •

The Venetian causeway toll has been dropped back to a dime each way, the police chiefs haven't had to order any gangsters out of town in more than a week, now and then you run across a grandmother shopping with her clothes on, and, believe it or not, you encounter people everywhere who seem to be here for leisure!

• • • •

This looks like a tropical wintering place for the first time since Christmas . . . Big jitters have declined 67 per cent all along the line, there is practically no screaming anywhere, and it is days since your correspondent has seen a visitor ordering his breakfast from a dog racing chart or dropping a quarter in a letter box and hysterically fumbling for an iron lever.

• • • •

Hialeah, so recently the center of life, action and breakdowns of horses and horse followers, is now the world's largest abandoned garden . . . The pink flamingoes, a couple of hedge clippers and a few torn mutuel tickets enjoy complete privacy, and the daily traffic rush is off to the south to Tropical Park, where men are Elks, where botanists are rare and where horses are 40 to 1 . . . It is like getting back to the frankfurter roast in your beer clothes after a week at a formal dinner party.

• • • •

Once again nobody sees anything wrong in telling the cash customers by loud speaker where the horses are in a given race, a waiter can be located without binoculars, and if you drop a dollar bill you are not socially ruined if you stoop to pick it up.

• • • •

There is comfort on the golf links, the fishing is good, the weather is good, the food is good, people's faces are good, traffic is good, and now and then a tip on a horse is good . . . This section of Florida is now so pleasant you'd hardly recognize it . . . It actually looks like a winter resort and not a midway.

Add Major Fumblers.

An optimist is Jervis Plover—
In March he thinks the winter is over.

Uncle Sam has 29,000 farms on his hands as a result of unpaid Federal loans. Well, he'll just have to wait until the trailer camp craze spreads a little more.

If those Dionne quints had been born in the United States the Government would have all their money, too, only it would be called taxation.

P. L. T. says that he followed Jim Farley to the mutuel windows at Hialeah and observed that he always bet Great Haste but always avoided a bet on Gold Standard.

France Under Blum

Observer Sees No Obstacle To Socialist Premier In Social Or International Fields; Economic Problem Threatens.

By Jacques Kayser.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE BLUM MINISTRY is now nine months old. It has, therefore, already lasted three months longer than the average lifetime of Third Republic ministries. Nor is it at the end of its rope. Far from it. Indeed the overthrow of the present government would create a crisis that could be solved only by the dissolution of the Chamber of Deputies, a development the opposition groups do not desire.

It is evident, moreover, that new elections would strengthen the present majority (about 370 deputies out of 618) and especially the Socialist Party which is now, numerically, the first party in the house with more than 140 deputies. What would, in fact, be the Socialist Party's platform for elections?

In his last speech, Leon Blum gave an idea of its main lines. The Socialist Party would say: "The last experience was not a Socialist experience. It was the experience of a coalition of the Radical Socialist (Herriot and Daladier), and Socialist parties with the parliamentary support of the Communist Party. If we have not fulfilled all that was expected of us, it is because we were forced to ward off the vehement attacks of our adversaries ,and also because we were sometimes held back by the hesitations of our allies. We want to go further. So that this may be done, give us your votes. Give us the majority."

There is no doubt that such argument would impress the electors. And it is because the opponents of the government fully realize this that, while avoiding a new election, they are trying to sabotage the regime. The government's failure would enable them to tell the electors: "The Popular Front government has led you to your ruin."

Foreign Policy Offers Small Chance For Upset.

IN MY OPINION the chances of dissolution, with the international situation being what it is, is slight. Nor can it be said that the government is leading the nation on the road to ruin. On the contrary, a great majority of Frenchmen applaud the government for its domestic policy, for its social policy and for its international policy.

The government's domestic policy is one of scrupulous attachment to the principles of democracy and of liberty. It is marked by an ardent will to bar the road to all Fascist enterprises, by a determination to offer no chance of success either to the reactionaries on the right or to the revolutionaries on the left. France is neither Fascist nor Communist and the Popular Front by its methods of government, as by the reforms it has already accomplished, is proving itself the strongest rampart against both systems.

The government's social policy has been marked by a great number of essential reforms demanded for years by the workers. France, one of the leading political democracies in the world, is now on the way to becoming an economic democracy as well.

Certain laws which have been applied—for instance, those regarding paid vacations, collective bargaining, the reduction of workhours, compulsory arbitration, and similar questions, as well as the steps taken to bring about the nationalization of arms and munition factories—which have provided the masses with proof that the government is intent on carrying out its electoral promises.

Peace And Defense Plans Receive General Approval.

REGARDING the government's international policies it is clear that a very large majority of the country, regardless of party distinctions, approves the cabinet's attitude. The country wants peace, together with vigilant national defense.

No one can suspect this government of having made insufficient efforts in either direction. It is enough to read over Blum's speeches, and also to refer to his most important acts to be convinced that he is fully devoted to the national cause and that this national cause can not be better served than by an absolute fidelity to the cause of peace. This justifies the whole attitude of France, face to face with the dramatic developments of the Spanish tragedy.

Agreement with the peaceful nations, ever-renewed attempts in order to arrive at an understanding with Germany within the framework of a general settlement, close co-operation with the democratic countries—without plunging France into any crusade of democracy against dictatorship; that is the general program of the government.

As regards its internal social policies and its foreign relationships, one can say that from the point of view of their repercussions on the political situation, no difficulties arise. The only uncertain point is precisely that one on which the opposition has brought all their efforts to bear: the financial and economic situation.

FRANCE is a country whose inhabitants are, for the most part, peasants. The traditional strength of France resides in the country and among her middle classes—small property owners, small bourgeoisie.

On this account, any financial and economic policy which adversely affects the interests of the agricultural element or of the middle class is certain to be dangerous. Until now, the government has succeeded in its program of keeping up the price of farm products and thus keeping the peasants content. The organized workers have also been taken care of. In the solution of labor conflicts the government has co-operated with the leading labor organization—the Confederation of Labor—and with the employers organization—the General Confederation of Industry. More than 5,000,000 workers are grouped in syndicates. But the greater part of the small employers and artisans are not represented in a centralized organization. Not as much care has been taken of their interests as was possible and this has occasioned a certain amount of grumbling.

The government has prepared and Parliament has voted plans tending to remedy this situation. Farm relief and the indispensable rise of salaries (in June certain workers in the large cities were paid less than 400 francs—less than $20 a month) brought about a rise in prices. Because of these factors the beneficial effects expected from the devaluation of the franc have been offset, in a measure.

Are we in Frances to experience the vicious circle of rising wages and rising prices, rising prices and still higher wages and so? Is the necessary increase in the purchasing power of the masses to be forever rendered ineffectual by a steady increase in the cost of living?

THIS IS the crucial problem facing France. Its solution depends for a great part on the discipline which everyone must observe, government officials as well as workers, peasants as well as capitalists.

Courageously, Leon Blum has appealed for co-operation directly to the workers. He has shown them that all rises in salaries, in the present circumstances, can bring about the failure of the experience he is attempting, and furthermore can involve new perils for the case of democracy. He insisted on the necessity of a "pause." This "pause" must allow the development of a more liberal policy of commercial exchanges and customs agreements in the way of a general decrease of tariffs.

In the domestic policy, the "pause" becomes what "nonintervention" has been in the international policy. The one saved peace; the other may save democracy.

In this way the magnificent effort presently accomplished in France so as to make of the approaching exposition a splendid display of scientific progress, of technique and of art, may be crowned with success.

There is every reason to think that it shall be so.

In London

By Barnet Nover

A New Political Star Rises.

BRITISH INDUSTRY, Sir Thomas Inskip, the minister of defense co-ordination in the Baldwin cabinet, has warned, may have to stand still during the next three years while the Nation rearms. But British politics will hardly follow suit. About the time the defense activities are slated to reach their peak, Great Britain may be in the midst of another election. For the mandate of the present House of Commons expires in 1940.

It is much too early to speculate whether or not that election will result in a further decline in the strength of the so-called National coalition to the point where the Labor party will again be able to take over the reins. But should that happen, and it is not impossible, the chances are increasing that the premier would then be Herbert Morrison. For that gentleman, described by David Wills, in a recent article in The Post, as "a small, self-satisfied looking man, with a wiry brush of hair, a quiet voice, a pontificial manner and a well-earned reputation as an organizer and party leader," is now by way of being British Labor's man of destiny.

• • • •

THE FORTUNES of that party which had such a meteoric rise in the years immediately after the war have been somewhat dimmed of late. As a consequence of the financial crisis of 1931 it was rent apart, the rank and file going one way, some of the principal leaders another.

Ramsay MacDonald, twice Laborite prime minister; Philip Snowden, once regarded as the Robespierre of a coming British revolution; J. H. Thomas and some of the lesser fry deserted to the "National coalition" in the name of patriotism and the continuance of a gold standard whose upset was so soon after to be hailed as a triumph of statesmanship.

Numerically, this loss was not considerable. And Laborites could solace themselves with the thought that mentally MacDonald, Thomas and Snowden had parted company with the movement long before. Nonetheless it was their defection which made possible the National government's sweep in the elections of October, 1931. In that plebiscite the Labor party suffered a disastrous setback. It was reduced in the House of Commons to a bare handful. Its rout was even more complete than that of the Republicans in the American election of 1936.

Yet within less than four years the Laborites came back. They increased their Parliamentary strength threefold and the total vote for their candidates was in excess of 8,000,000.

• • • •

SINCE THEN the party has continued to mend its fences, but with relatively indifferent success. In 1935, at a time when it had reasons to believe that its success was assured, the Conservatives stole their thunder. The international planks in the government's platform were taken bodily from the Opposition. After years, during which British enthusiasm for the League of Nations was viewed as a harmless aberration of the Anglo-Saxon evangelical spirit, the Tories suddenly discovered the transcendant virtues of the Geneva organization.

Like Paul at Damascus, "Honest Stanley" suddenly saw a great light. But the sincerity of his conversion has since been questioned. In a candid moment not long ago the prime minister revealed that what he had in mind in 1935 was an ambitious rearmament program. He had kept it secret from the electorate for fear that it would be found unpalatable. Instead he fought the campaign on the issue of helping the government support the League.

The exponents of rearmament "without stint or limit" to use a Wilsonian phrase, now have it all their own way in Great Britain. But all the Laborites can do about it is to register futile and baffled protests. For while the Tories were never wholly converted to the program of collective security, the Laborites have become converted to the idea of rearmament. Thus the Labor element in Parliament composes an opposition that it is in no position to oppose.

THIS LABORITE confusion regarding rearmament is also reflected in confusion regarding the international situation and, for that matter, domestic policy as well.

One faction, headed by Sir Stafford Cripps, clamors for louder Socialist music and stronger Socialist wine. Another wing still adheres to the Fabian program whose slogan, if such a mouthful can be called a slogan, used to be "the inevitability of gradualness." The party as a whole, because of the strong trade union background of the movement, probably leans strongly to the latter point of view. The Labor party is not revolutionary. But if the right wing controls the machine the left wing usually writes the program and conducts the propaganda.

The history of Anglo-Saxon countries has revealed that detailed and carefully integrated programs are not always necessary to win elections. Sometimes they constitute a definite handicap. It is much more important, as a rule, to have able leaders. But it is precisely at this point that the British Labor party finds itself at a particular disadvantage. It has leaders, many of them, but no leadership to speak of. Or, to put it another way, its able men have not been leaders and its leaders lack ability. And that is why Herbert Morrison has a chance to rise in the world. For in a time of confusion he has shown a capacity to go straight to the point. That makes him a marked man.

THE LATE Joseph Chamberlain rose to national influence because he gave Birmingham a model administration. Herbert Morrison's career bids fair to duplicate that of "Brummagem Joe" and even reach higher. For Chamberlain never got to the premiership, although his son, Neville, may.

It is a striking fact, certainly, that at a time when the Labor movement nationally is at sixes and sevens, the Labor party in the London area, under Morrison's leadership, has solidly entrenched itself. Securing control of the London County Council in 1934, the Laborites have revealed a remarkable capacity for action and administration. Because of their labors, London is a cleaner and better place.

Slums have been rebuilt, schools have been improved, the health service expanded and other necessary reforms carried out—at a cost that compares favorably with the cost of municipal services anywhere else in the world and with an efficiency second to none.

Last week the voters of Greater London returned their verdict. Of the 124 seats in the county council, which governs the metropolis, the Laborites won 75, making headway even in districts which, in national elections, are overwhelmingly Conservative. These results may and may not foreshadow the turn in the tide in favor of Labor throughout the Nation. But there is no doubt that it adds luster to Herbert Morrison's reputation. His star is definitely in the ascendant.

Shakespeare

By William Lyon Phelps

On The Stage.

William Shakespeare, the greatest poet who ever lived, died at his home in Stratford, England, April 23, 1616. He was recognized by his contemporaries as the greatest dramatist of his time, and his intimate friend, Ben Jonson, said he was the greatest dramatist of any time, and every year has furnished additional proof of Ben's sweeping assertion. Every year is a great year for Shakespeare, but this year in America has seen on the stage the "Hamlet" of Gielgud and the "Hamlet" of Howard, and these two men are among the leading actors of our day; it has seen the Othello of a favorite screen star, Walter Huston, and although Gielgud broke all records by playing Hamlet for a larger number of consecutive performances than had ever previously been known in any town in the Western Hemisphere, the most important theatrical triumph of Shakespeare in this season is the glorious production in New York of "Richard II," with Maurice Evans as the unfortunate king. Many believe that Maurice Evans is the greatest living English-speaking actor.

• • • •

New editions of the complete works of Shakespeare have appeared this season; he is a continuous, perennial best seller.

And now appears an entirely new edition of Shakespeare's "Sonnets," edited by Prof. Tucker Brooke, of Yale, and published by the Oxford University Press, New York. Although Shakespeare's two long narrative poems, "Venus and Adonis," and "Lucrece" are distinctly second-rate, for if he had written only those, he would be, today one of the innumerable minor poets, his sonnets are fully as great as his plays. Prof. Burke has printed them in the order which he believes to be correct, and his Introduction and Notes supply extremely valuable and interesting new information and conjectures.

Hot Money

Department Of Commerce Statistics Show 71 Per Cent Increase In Foreign Funds Pouring Into Wall Street.

By Herbert M. Bratter.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

EVER SINCE President Roosevelt's reference last fall to the question of controlling foreign investments in the United States, the public has scrutinized with interest any official statistics bearing on the subject.

The data on gold imports are one case in point. In December the Treasury Department announced that it would thereafter keep future gold imports from entering the country's credit base by sterilizing all new arrivals of the metal. That process, however, in no way checks the movement of European capital into our rising stock market, whose upswing it rather stimulates.

During the four weeks ended February 26, for example, only $350 of gold left the United States, whereas $117,600,000 of foreign gold entered the country. Many people are wondering what may happen if for some reason the process is reversed. We could easily afford to lose gold, in which we have a surplus. But could we so readily countenance a large-scale liquidation of foreign investments in our stock market? Would foreign selling of stocks precipitate domestic liquidation and, perhaps, rock the market? That is a question which bothers the Administration.

Long-Term Funds Rose, Short-Term Imports Down.

OF DIRECT BEARING on the so-called hot money question are the balance of payments figures just released by the Department of Commerce.

The tabulation, compiled by Amos E. Taylor, comprises the preliminary estimates for 1936. According to the deparriment, the net inflow of new foreign and repatriated American funds going into the stock and bond market represented an increase of 71 per cent over 1935.

The reported net movements of long-term funds rose from $462,000,000 in 1935 to $792,000,000 in 1936. Net short-term imports on the other hand declined more than 50 per cent, or from $970,000,000 to $404,000,000. Allowing for currency movements and miscellaneous capital exports, the net imports of all capital items declined from $1,536,000,000 in 1935 to $1,141,000,000 in 1936, a sum significantly large. For example, the latter sum was sufficient to pay for almost half of our entire commodity exports during the year.

A noteworthy fact is the change in the relationship of short-term and long-term incoming funds since 1935. In 1935 the short-term inflow was $920,000,000, or more than twice the $462,000,000 inflow on capital account. In 1936, on the other hand, net long-term imports of capital, $792,000,000, were more than twice as large as the $404,000,000 of short-term imports. In other words, during 1936 almost $800,000,000 of new money came into the American markets for the accumulation of American securities or in minor degree, for the repatriation of foreign securities.

Gold Imports Exceeded $1,000,000,000 In 1936.

THE INFLOW of gold from abroad—now for the third consecutive year in excess of $1,000,000,000—has been unprecedentedly heavy. Since the growth in the value of our commodity imports has been too moderate to absorb the demand on the part of foreigners for American funds, that demand has expressed itself in the form of an inflow of gold, and also silver.

Net gold imports alone, however, have not been an accurate measure of the westward transatlantic flow of capital. The net gold imports, inclusive of earmarkings, totaled $1,030,000,000 last year, compared with the net capital imports o. $1,141,000,000. The difference between the two figures is accounted for by other items. (Incidentally, while the gold and capital imports are assumed to represent private funds almost entirely, the question of the ability of the war debtor countries to meet their obligations here naturally suggests itself.)

We used to pride ourselves on our "favorable balance of trade," the excess of merchandise exports over imports. Last year our favorable balance on merchandise account was down to $34,000,000. During 1936, for the first time since the Government has been compiling balance-of-payments data, there occurred a net debit balance on account of trade and service items. In other words, excluding transactions on capital account or those reflected in gold and silver movements, but including service items, we last year had to make a net payment of $132,000,000 to foreigners.

This figure is arrived at by counterbalancing commodity imports and exports, American and foreign tourist expenditures, freight and shipping bills, interest, dividends and the like.. However, the $132,000,000 does not tell the whole story, because it does not take into account the heavy payments to foreigners for one other commodity—silver. This amounted to another $180,000,000, bringing the total to $312,000,000 on commodity and service account. Because the silver is paid for with new silver certificates and therefore does not appear as an item of expense in the Government's budget, it is sometimes erroneously assumed that the program "costs us nothing."

The balance of payments, of course, covers the entire Nation's transactions with foreigners—everything involving a payment—and from the figures it is quite clear that foreign sellers of silver received $180,000,000 (net) in American funds last year, as compared with $336,000,000 the year before.

Gold And Silver Imports Cost U. S. $1,210,000,000.

OUR GOLD and silver imports combined cost us $1,210,000,000. The difference between the net capital inflow of $1,141,000,000 and the net gold and silver imports just mentioned is made up by the $132,000,000 debit on account of merchandise and service items, and by a residual "credit" item of $201,000,000. The latter is still conspicuous in the official balance of payments data. In 1935 it was $391,000,000. This item in 1936 was, for example, greater than the bill for our heavy silver imports.

In theory the residual item should represent errors and unavoidable omissions. Actually, it may be assumed as well to include any official transactions which it is desired to keep unrevealed. When and as international monetary and financal relationships return nearer normalcy, this item in our international balance sheet may be expected to diminish. For the present certain governmental transactions must be expected to remain concealed.

Farley Predicts Roosevelt Backing

Gadsden, Ala., March 8 (AP).—Postmaster General James A. Farley predicted today "the people will support the President in any program he undertakes."

Addressing Alabama Democrats at a victory luncheon, Farley made no specific mention of the President's Supreme Court proposal or of other pending matters. He said he expected to discuss the court proposal in an address tomorrow at Chapel Hill, N. C.

The Postmaster General came here to dedicate Gadsden's new $200,000 postoffice addition.

"Within 48 hours after Franklin D. Roosevelt's inauguration in 1933, a critical situation in the United States had been checked," he said, "and within 100 days more beneficial legislation had been adopted than in any similar period in the country's history.

"Further legislation proposed by the President will have the support of the great majority of the people if we may judge by the last election."

Gov. Bibb Graves and Mrs. Graves and hundreds of leading party members attended the luncheon.

Historian Opposes Court Change Plan

New York, March 8 (AP).—James Truslow Adams, the writer and historian, publicly appealed tonight for the defeat of President Roosevelt's proposal to change the Supreme Court.

In a radio address he said the court's "independence" must not be "sacrificed to the changing moods of an electorate as reflected in even the best legislature, or subject to control by one man, no matter how benevolent or wise."

At the same time, the national committee to uphold constitutional government, headed by Frank E. Gannett, the publisher, announced that Adams had accepted membership in that committee, in a communication in which he said the court issue constituted "the greatest crisis since the Civil War."

Soviet 'Radio Sabotage' Charged; Inquiry Urged

Moscow, March 8 (AP).—Official press reports from Rostov-on-Don today charged an incident of "radio sabotage" against the Soviet regime.

Radio listeners in the industrial city, it was charged, were deliberately kept from hearing news that the central committee of the Communist Party had decided last week to democratize the party structure. The government organ Izvestia demanded an immediate investigation of why the Rostov radio station shut off the important announcement.

Williams 'Ran Up' Stock, SEC Says

By the Associated Press.

Securities Commission counsel contended yesterday parent companies in the Harrison Williams mammoth utilities empire of 1929 "ran up" their stocks for the purpose of floating new issues.

David Schenker, the counsel, wove the complex narrative around testimony by Sidney J. Weinberg, a witness in the government's examination of investment trust operations.

Questioning centered around formation of the Shenandoah Corporation, a link in the Williams chain, which was forged by the combined resources of the Central States Electric Corporation and the Goldman Sachs Trading Corporation.

Jackson Memorial Commission Urged

A bill to create an Andrew Jackson Memorial Commission similar to the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission was introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Chandler (Deocrat), of Tennessee.

The bill proposes a commission of nine to investigate ways and means of establishing a memorial. Three would be named by the President, three by the Speaker of the House and three by the Vice President.

England Hits Reprisals Of Italians in Ethiopia

London, March 8 (AP).—Members of the House of Commons today assailed the "savagery" with which, they said, Italian troops in Addis Ababa carried out reprisals against natives suspected of the recent attempt to assassinate Viceroy Rodolfo Graziani.

Replying for the government to questions, Viscount Cranborne, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, said: "Although His Majesty's government have been unable to get full information, it has been learned that the soldiers took severe reprisals, causing a large number of deaths and extensive destruction of property."

Poll Indicates European Split In Case Of War

Britain, France And Russia Probably Would Face Italy And Germany.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

It is a common statement that Europe now is choosing sides for the next war. In an effort to determine what nations will fight each other in the opposing groups the London Bureau of the United Press polled European capitals for reaction to Britain's giant armament program, believing that sentiment on this development would be a significant indication of alignments. Results of the poll are set forth in the following dispatch.—Editor.

London March 8.—If war were to start in Europe tomorrow it would find Britain, France and Soviet Russia aligned against a Fascist bloc headed by Germany and Italy.

Japan, if presistent reports that her agreement with Germany is tantamount to a military alliance are correct, would support the Fascist bloc.

Holland and Belgium would attempt to remain neutral.

The attitude of the Balkan States would be one of hesitation—an effort to keep clear of the conflict until there was some indication which side was going to win.

Denmark and the Scandinavian powers also would attempt to remain neutral, as they did in the World War.

These conclusions were drawn by impartial observers tonight from a broad survey of reaction by the major military powers to Britain's $7,500,000,000 re-armament program.

No War Seen In Near Future.

Experts were not willing to admit that they expect a European war in the near future. They do expect it in what they described as "the comparatively distant future," however, and they believe that the alignments now being drawn will stand.

They do not class Soviet Russia as a "democracy" in the Eurpopean sense of the word but they believe that Russia—whether under the present Stalin dictatorship or some modified form which may emerge from it—will fight with the same lallies she joined in the great war.

The survey showed a division of European powers similar to that before 1914 when Britain, France and Russia composed the "Triple Entente" in opposition to the "Triple Alliance" which included Germany, Austria-Hungary and Italy. The main difference is that Austria and Hungary now are weak powers whose alignment is unpredictable.

The inquires throughout Europe show that the continental nations either support or resent the British armament program in accordance with their own plans for future action.

France Applauds, Germany Suspects

France views the British program as an important safeguard for peace. Germany suspects that it may mean that she is to be crushed. Italy, at first indefferent to the British plan, now asks toward whom London's new guns will be pointed.

Russia frankly asserts that Britain is arming against Germany, her own bitterest enemy, and hence is gratified.

All the "totalitarian powers" are annoyed at speeches by British statesmen indicating that England is arming to preserve the peace while they are menacing it.

The Italian newspaper, Gazeta del Populo, said:

"When Britain renounced sanctions she declared that 'the noose was not sufficiently strong,' and retired to strengthen it. Now she is announcing the preparation of a noose of exceptional strength. Why is she then surprised if we in our modest way are preparing a small knife to cut the noose?"

The Italians assert that they are not responsible for Europe's armament race, putting the blame on France which re-armed on a large scale immediately after the World War.

Collective Security Hit.

Germany, although displeased at the prospect of a re-armed Britain, applauds the attack on the doctrine of collective security which the British re-armament program implies.

Germans commenting on Finance Minister Neville Chamberlain's statement that "armament serves only this nation's own security," say that this is self-evident from the German viewpoint.

Germany has been the most bitter opponent of the French and Russian plan of building up "collective security" through a European pact uniting all countries against an aggressor in case of a European war.

Pravda, official organ of Russia's Communist Party, believes that "the fact the interests of England and Germany are conflicting more and more strongly is clear, and if the White Paper (in which the British re-armament program was announced) did not answer the question of England's purpose in rearming, the German press answered it quite frankly.

"England is arming because Germany is arming. It is quite obvious that England is preparing for a big war."

Transpacific air-mail service will be extended to Hong Kong on April 21, the Postoffice Department announced last night.

Connections will be made at Hong Kong with the Chinese domestic air-mail system and with the British air-mail route for the Straits Settlements, Siam, India, Dutch East Indies and Australia.

Pan-American Airways clipper planes now carry mail to the Philippine Islands via Hawaii and Guam. The service will be extended to Hong Kong via Macao, Portuguese territory, effective with the westbound Pan-American flight due to leave San Francisco April 21. The first eastbound flight is scheduled to leave Hong Kong on April 29.

McGrady Urges U. S. 'Crusade' For Court Plan

meeting at the Temple, and the speakers "shuttled" back and forth between the two auditoriums.

Ridiculing what he termed "fine distinctions" in the Supreme Court's interpretation of the Constitution in the decision outlawing the NRA, LaGuardia said:

"It objected to a chicken that reached my city. This chicken was a citizen of Iowa. Through an act of commerce it became a kosher chicken, whereupon the Supreme Court said it had lost its interstate character and its Iowa citizenship and ipso facto had become a citizen of New York. But if that Iowa chicken had continued on to Maryland it would still have been in interstate commerce.

"Such fine distinctions were never intended in the Constitution. They hamper and retard democracy."

LaGuardia said he is amused by persons who pretend to know what the founding fathers intended when they wrote the Constitution. He pointed out that they certainly did not intend to have direct election of Senators.

"It is for each age to decide what the Government should and should not do," LaGuardia said.

Unless uniform labor conditions are established throughout the country, LaGuardia declared, we cannot have a uniform standard of living.

LaGuardia carefully avoided any mention of his international argument with Adolf Hitler, but the audience laughed when in the course of his remarks he said:

"I don't say our economic system should be Slavic, Latin or Teutonic —but I don't know what it will be if the people are prevented from taking action."

"Abhors" Hitler.

Earlier in the day LaGuardia said an apology by the State Department to Germany had not altered his belief that Adolf Hitler is menacing the peace of the world.

"Standing in the shadow of the Capitol," declared LaGuardia, "I repeat that I still have an abhorrence for any one who threatens the peace of the world. If Hitler thinks that refers to him, he is absolutely correct."

Four detectives and a uniformed police escort, fearful of a possible Nazi demonstration, accompanied LaGuardia.

Before the lecture audiences LaGuardia advocated a Nation system of old age pensions, unemployment insurance and abolition of child labor.

"We cannot continue keeping millions on relief," he asserted. "It is unsound, unscientific and it doesn't solve anything permanently."

The very essence of a democratic government is change, asserted Dr. Charles A. Beard, who followed LaGuardia to the lecture platform. The institutions of democracy, he pointed out, do not depend upon the life of any persons or group of persons.

"They do not form a close system of economy or culture," he added. "They are devised to cope with the rise, flow and alteration of social and economic systems, with the creation, modification and adaptation of systems. They rest upon human ideals, interests and judgments more eternal than systems."

The great enemy of American democracy is war, Dr. Beard said. The founding fathers, he said, were aware of the dangers of military despotism and avoided such a menace in writing the Constitution.

New Upstarts' Old Maxims.

"With these traditions imbedded in the very substance of their civilization," Dr. Beard said, Americans may be pardoned for refusing to take at face value the old maxims of new upstarts.

Senator Norris, in paying tribute to Senator Cutting, said:

"These lectures are intended in a modest way to plant the seeds of Bronson Cutting's philosophy in the hearts of the people whom he loved, that they may bear fruit years after all those who now live have passed through the portals that separate humanity from eternity."

"The story of Bronson Cutting's life will lighten the burden of future generations by silently, perhaps unconsciously, but nevertheless forcefully and irresistibly, influencing the hearts, the minds and the souls of unborn generations. . . . The influence of his life, the lessons it taught, the example it set, will become the guiding star that shall ever lead onward and upward.

Senator Cutting's mother, Mrs. W. Bayard Cutting, and his sister, Mrs. Olivia James, were in the audience, which included a score of members of the diplomatic corps led by British Ambassador Ronald Lindsey, 34 Senators, 65 Representatives, high Government officials and social and liberal leaders.

Negligent Homicide Act Called Invalid

The constitutionality of the negligent homicide act was attacked in Police Court yesterday by Attorney Daniel Partridge 3d, who was representing Ervin H. Thomsen, 27, 7311 Georgia avenue northwest.

Judge Walter J. Casey took Partridge's motion to quash the charges against Thomsen, who was held in connection with the death of William A. Boss, 59, under advisement until March 22 so that he might have time to make a thorough study of the two-year-old law.

Partridge contended the act illegal because neither the court nor the defendant were informed as to the facts. His particular objection was that the law charges all defendants with driving at an immoderate rate of speed but does not take into consideration the speed of the vehicle or the speed limit at the place where the accident occurs.

Germany Hints At Peace Treaty For Neighbors

Western European Accord Intimated as Tension in Spain Eases.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 8.—Germany's foreign office hinted confidently tonight of a forthcoming offer by the Reich to participate in a Western European peace pact.

There was a marked spirit of optimistic belief that such a pledge by Europe's powers to keep the peace soon would become an established fact.

While officials declined to state the purpose of a cabinet meeting scheduled for tomorrow, intimations in the highest political and official quarters indicated that Joachim von Ribbentrop, Ambassador to London, would be charged with resuming discussion of a new security pact.

Optimism was based first of all on the conviction the Spanish situation was clearing in such a manner as to lessen tension between Germany and her western neighbors.

Germany now is apparently satisfied to let the Spanish decide their own fate, provided they don't "go Communist." Control of foreign activity by the European non-intervention committee, expected to get under way next week, will be bound to help Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco make his victory certain, it is felt here.

That, it is declared here, is all Germany is interested in. It is up to the Spaniards after that to determine their own future. Germany, therefore, can turn to other problems.

MENTAL FUNCTIONING UNAFFECTED BY CROWNS
Adirondack Research records for John F. Rolph, civil engineer, show that his mental functioning and muscular control were not noticeably affected on days after normal drinking of Crown Whiskies the preceding evening.

Sleep 8 hours. Eat less than you want. Take short rests through the day. Relax before meals . . . If you drink, choose the form of whiskey that is best for you. Use it moderately.

How can you tell which form of whiskey is "best for you"? We offer these facts as a guide: During a 41-day research, 984 hours, by a famous psychologist, a group of average men recently drank normal amounts of Crown Whiskies under hour-by-hour observation. Next-morning records showed no appreciable after-effects upon mental and muscular reactions, sleep or appetite.

I was sittin' here lookin' out the window today when up drove a big, beautiful orchid-colored deliver" job, all trimmed in polished nickel, and out stepped an intellectual lookin' man with a white uniform. When I met him at the door, he introduced himself as Dr. Dorsey, representing The Delicious Diets for Dignified Dog Company of Hollywood.

When I told him that I jest fed dog scraps from the table, he arched his eyebrow in horror. Then I called my mongrel pup in and the fella arched his other eyebrow. I don't go in much for pedigreed dogs. I lean more toward the hound, but if I can't get that, I like a nice mixture.

I think some people carry that pedigree stuff too far. I know one lady out here who has some pedigreed dogs that she gives more attention to than she does her own children. Her husband told her one time, he says, "Why is it that when you hear the children cry at night, you jest roll over and go back to sleep; but if you hear one of those pups whine, you break your neck gettin' out to 'em?" She says, "Remember, the daddy of them pups is a thoroughbred."

THE FEDERAL DIARY

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

A scientist is a very patient man. A photographer is not necessarily a patient man. But if Photographer Carl Francis Turvey had never been patient before, he was after a two-year session with Scientist Dr. Everett Idris Evans. It was these two, working with Raymond Evans, director, Motion Picture Division, Agriculture Department, who made possible those two astonishing pictures, "In the Beginning" and "The Cicada," shown the other day in Agriculture's auditorium.

These pictures showed the births, stage by stage, of a rabbit and a cicada. And were brimmed full of the facts of life and the patience of man—rather, the patience of Photographer Turvey,' who works for the motion Picture Division, and the patience of Scientist Evans, now with the University of Chicago.

Photographer Turvey set the time lapse adjustment on his camera; Scientist Evans calculated the various lapses in the birth processes going on in the cicada and rabbit. Photographer Turvey, stout, calm-faced, related: "We worked two years on 'In the Beginning;' worked four months on 'The Cicada' . . . Sometimes we worked all day and night, too. But he never said a word about the overtime . . . he seemed to like it, and so Photographer Turvey should be rated as a scientist, too.

One week from tonight Federal Employes Union No. 2, N. F. F. E., will be mixing the words of statesmen with the juices of a good time in the celebration of the union's twenty-first anniversary . . . The function will be held in the National Press Club, beginning at 7 o'clock . . . The statesmen-speakers will be: Senators Bulow and McCarren, Representatives Ramspeck and Maverick and Luther C. Steward and Gertrude M. McNally, president and secretary-treasurer, respectively, N. F. F. E. . . . Joseph I. Menehan, Bureau of Reclamation, heads a committee of 100 on arrangements.

Researches Glamorous

Ball players don't get but three strikes in which to make good. The cranberry is luckier; it gets four bounces. Government scientists tell us so. The cranberry, like the batter, must prove its vitality and fitness for the market. The cranberry's test is by bouncing over a barrier. Those that have decayed or otherwise deteriorated won't bounce when allowed to drop a short distance. The grading is done by machinery, and the berries get four chances to bound the barrier. If they don't bound, they've struck out and won't become sauce for the turkey. Now enter the scientists:

Their problem is how to retain this quality bounce in the cranberry after it has been in storage from two to four months. The cranberry, mind you, is costly to produce and it is important for the grower to market as large a percentage of the crop as possible after the long storage period.

Scientists, after testing a number of samples at temperature ranges from 30 degrees F. to 70 degrees F., have concluded that holding the berries at 46 degrees F. reduced decay and breakdown to a minimum. Berries held at this temperature also retained the most attractive color. As a result of the experiments, the consumer may obtain bouncing berries all through the winter months.

Sociologists, country-wide, are probably explaining it—we'll simply state the condition: F. B. I. fingerprint cards from January 1 to December 31, 1936, show more 22-year-old arrests than any others of the age group 16 to 24. The 22-year-olds who ran afoul numbered 20,519. The number of 21-year-old persons arrested was 20,395. The 16-year-old arrests totaled only 8,120. For the 24-year-old group the number was 18,235. "The seriousness of the problem of juvenile delinquency is manifested by records which show that 17 o ' of every 100 persons arrested during 1936 were under 21 years of age," says the F. B. I., simply stating the facts.

Chest Donors Hear Hint for A New Name

President Dodge Holds Contributors Misled by Present Title.

Thinks It Does Not Show Full Range; Other Leaders Report.

A suggestion that the name Community Chest be changed so as to convey more clearly the idea that it is a federation of agencies was made yesterday by Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Chest, speaking at the ninth annual meeting of the Chest, held at the United States Chamber of Commerce Building.

Dodge declared that the name Community Chest seemed, to convey the idea to contributors that they were giving to one organization instead of 65 which really comprised the Chest.

Dodge expressed the appreciation of the members of the board of trustees for the splendid service by the press, radio stations, motion picture theaters, speakers and volunteer workers. Throughout the past year, he said, the sick and underprivileged have ben made happier by this freely given assistance.

Dodge concluded with this statement:

"I wish to end this report with a strong note of confidence. I thank you all for the courtesy and loyal support I have received during the past year, I sincerely believe this next year will be the best the agencies have had. I believe the emergency appeals and the problems facing us, if faced and used in the spirit of unselfish ministering to the sick and underprivileged, will be helpful, rather than otherwise."

Overhead Is Held Down.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, declared that "we are proud of the fact that over a period of eight years the average cost of raising and administering funds to the member agencies of the Chest has been 6.93 per cent, as against the 20 to 25 per cent of separate solicitation costs."

"Some Chest cities carry a large publicity staff," Willett said; "we have only one man. There is a constant problem between those who say 'you don't tell us anything about the Chest,' and those who declare that no money should be spent on publicity."

"In times of crisis," Willett said, "self-sacrifice seems easy, but in better times individuals and groups often show a tendency to relax their efforts or to put renewed emphasis upon their own special interests. As agencies strive to do fully a task they know is so vital, the question arises as to whether they shall push forward as individuals or as parts of the Chest. That leads to the question as to whether the Chest still is the best way for co-operative financing.

Believes Chest Way Best.

"If I thought that special appeals were best," Willett said in conclusion, "I would be the first to vote for the abolition of the Chest. But when I see cities like Chicago and Boston, which have had a long experience of separate solicitation, pooling their interests now by the creation of Community Chests, I am more than ever convinced that there is no better way for the present American city. The whole program is more important than any of its parts and we must remember the close relation of hospitals, relief and housing and the effect upon each other when we think of the importance of agency programs. When we are planning recreation programs we dare not forget the tax cost of delinquency."

H. L. Rust, jr., treasurer of the Chest, reported on the financial condition of the organization.

In the absence of Newbold Noyes, chairman of the nominating committee, Ray H. Everett read the nominations of 130 membs of the board of trustees who will represent the contributors. They and the 130 members representing the agencies were unanimously elected.

Bedridden Woman Dies As House Catches Fire

Maggie Jones, 70, colored, was burned to death yesterday afternoon in a small fire at 1523 Sixth street northwest. An invalid, confined to her bed for the last five years, she was alone in the house at the time.

Firemen said the fire apparently was caused by an overheated chimney in the other half of the house, 1525 Sixth street.

Brady Asks End to Publicity In Jimmy's Journey to Florida

If Jimmy Brady, 12-year-old student at St. Anne's Parochial School, is to get any more publicity it must be for leading his class, covering himself with glory on the athletic field or maybe raising a prize guppy.

Anyway it is not going to be for running away from his home to watch the Nationals train at Orlando, Fla., not, that is, if Jimmy's father has anything to do about it.

Granting a reluctant interview at his home yesterday, James T. Brady, of 4210 Thirty-eighth street northwest, solicitor of the Veterans' Administration, said:

"Please help us end this thing. It's been difficult enough as it is, what with the effect it has on Mrs. Brady. If you are a father, you ought to appreciate that.

"A newspaper this afternoon said that we hadn't decided whether to punish the boy. Of course we are going to punish him. How I don't know. What can a father do in such a case? Anyhow, please, no more publicity."

Jimmy was well on his way to Orlando to see Clark Griffith's athletes in training when he was halted and given refuge at the home of friends in Palatka, Fla. There Mr. and Mrs. Brady caught up with him and started home, arriving here late Saturday night.

Yesterday Jimmy resumed his classes at St. Anne's, faced with the task of making up three weeks' work. Meantime, since newspapermen also are frequently fathers, there won't be any more publicity.

Mrs. Sisson Defends Organization Against Charges at Session of D. C. Chapters; Mrs. Grimes Boomed for National Honor.

Difference between programs for "practical peace" and those for "peace at any price" were stated and stressed yestrday by Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson, of Chicago, at the afternoon session of the thirty-sixth conference of the D. C. Daughters of the American Revolution.

The national chairman of the national defense committee of the organization, Mrs. Sisson, scored the tenets of the emergency peace campaign "that advocates disarmament; that interferes with carefully developed plans for an efficient national defense; that dictates to those in position to know the needs of this country; that trains youth to refuse to defend his native land in time of stress."

Declaring that the Daughters of the American Revolution "stand for peace, a practical peace such as this world can understand," Mrs. Sisson pointed out that many of the so-called peace societies have as their prime objectives the attainment of "a new social order" as may be proven by their own literature and pronouncements.

Defends Against Attacks.

In this connection, the speaker mentioned that most peace-at-any-price groups cry out against "war and facism" while they are laying the foundation for a philosophy of government subversive of American ideals. "Why, we may well ask, do these organizations not carry out against communism also?" she continued. "Whether fascism, communism or socialism, America wants no 'isms' save Americanism!"

Defending the D. A. R. against critics who term it a "militaristic organization," Mrs. Sisson stressed that it had given hearty support to the Kllogg-Briand peace pact and that it was intolerant "of the kind of patriotism that would pick a quarrel with every foreign power that questions the motives of our Government. But we know that adequate defense is the best guaranty of peace," she went on, "and that the surest way to avoid entanglements with other nations is to look to the conomic betterment of our own people. Constant internal strife arising from a discontented citizenry will make it increasingly difficult for the Government to avoid international complications."

Mrs. Haig Presides.

With Mrs. Charles Carroll Haig, D. C. State regent of the D. A. R., presiding, reports of officers and committees representing the 59 chapters in the District, were given through the morning and afternoon sessions. Mrs. George Madden Grimes, chairman of the rsolutions committee, was indorsed as candidate for vice president general, an office to be filled at the national meeting of the D. A. R. in April.

Music and brief summaries of chapter work made up the program at last night's session. Patriotic numbers played by the United States Marine Band Orchestra punctunated regents' reports from the various chapters.

Reports of the Chapter House Corporation and of the special committee on laws will be given at this morning session, which will begin at 9:30 in Memorial Continental Hall. Voting on the indorsement of Mrs. Grimes as a national candidate will be carried on at noon.

Senator Robert R. Reynolds, of North Carolina, will be the speaker at the afternoon session. The banquet will be held at 7 p. m. at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. George F. Middleton is chairman o' arrangements for this function, which will close the confernce.

Southeast Unit Votes to Push P. U. C. Inquiry

Business Men Will Seek Co-operation of Other Civic Groups.

The Southeast Business Men's Association, meeting last night at the office of the Donohoe Real Estate Co., voted to request other business and civic organizations to back its efforts for an investigation of the Public Utilities Commission on the grounds that the commission is not protecting the public by permitting use of additional one-man cars and increased fares.

The association voted to ask the District appropriations sub-committee for an appropriation of $70,000 to complete the Anacostia High School.

The oyster roast of the group will be held at 1 p. m. Sunday, March 14, at Moose Hall, Annapolis.

Kalorama Citizens

Urging the defeat of the Jacobs bill, which would raise the District gasoline tax, and recommending in its stead a Federal contribution of $2,000,000, the Kalorama Citizens Association, meeting last night in John Quincy Adams School, protested that the Federal Government has, since 1934, paid only 21 per cent of the cost of maintaining the Nation's Capital.

A resolution also was adopted recommending that the conditions in the District Jail be brought up to those in Federal penal institutions. A 5½-day week and the necessary wages, it was stated, would cost the District government $38,000 a year.

The associatoin, reinforcing its last year's stand, adopted a resolution opposing the proposed District Racing Board.

Raymond H. Everett, executive secretary of the Social Hygiene Society, spoke on Dr. Thomas Parran's fight to wipe out venereal diseases in Washington.

Northeast Citizens

J. E. Overlade was appointed chairman of the committee on schools and colleges of the Northeast Citizens Association at its meeting last night at Ludlow School.

The association voted to ask the traffic director to have a stop sign placed at Tennessee avenue and Thirteenth street northeast.

Action was taken favoring or disapproving several bills now before Congress. They include the bill to regulate election of delegates to national party conventions, disapproved; bill to finance small arms practice by policemen, approved; bill to authorize a building for the office for the recorder of deeds, approved; bills to reglate beauty parlors and barber shops, approved in principle.

Hillcrest Citizens

The Hillcrest Citizens Association last night authorized its streets committee to circulate a peition among residents as a preliminary toward securing curbs and gutters in the community. A committee was named to organize a Girl Scout troop for the area. Ten new members were received.

C. A. Barker, of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, described improvements being made in Anacostia and Fort Dupont Parks. He told the association that the swimming pool at Anacostia Park had been completed and turned over to the District.

Parkview Citizens

The Parkview Citizens Association, meeting last night in Parkview School, adopted a resolution to invite debaters from the Junior Bar Association to speak before the club at its April meeting, on the Supreme Court issue.

President F. E. Hale also appointed a budget committee. Its members are H. H. Moore, treasurer of the club; Fred S. Walker, F. E. Smith and John S. Cole, club secretary.

District Sales Bill Is Passed After Attack

Mrs. Norton Is Put on Spot; Dirksen Defends His Committee.

By James D. Secrest.

A spirited debate broke yesterday over the heads of the House District Committee after several lawyer-members ducked out of a District day session and left Chairman Mary T. Norton to explain a legalistic bill establishing a uniform sales law for Washington.

Representative Michener (Republican), of Michigan, assailed the committee's report on the bill and demanded an explanation of the 50-page measure. Mrs. Norton, caught unawares, looked about for a member of the Judiciary sub-committee which reported the bill and, finding none, tackled the highly technical draft herself.

Finally Representative Chandler (Democrat), of Tennessee, a member of the House Judiciary Committee and unconnected with Mrs. Norton's committee, came to her rescue and explained the measure.

Passed Without Reading.

It subsequently was passed without being read and now goes to the White House as it was adopted by the Senate last month.

The debate came as a climax to a dull District day session during which Mrs. Norton pushed through seven minor bills in rapid-fire succession without pausing to explain them.

Members, settled down to their accustomed District day lethargy, became interested as Michener squared off and attacked first the committee generally, then the chairman, and finally his minority colleague, Representative Dirksen, of Illinois, ranking Republican member of the committee.

Dirksen at first took the whole affair with good humor, even when the question arose as to whether he is a member of the bar, but toward the end he struck back at Michener with sarcastic epithets.

Inadequate Explanation.

The debate ended with Chairman Norton expressing appreciation to members of the House for the successful District day, even for the criticism, and inviting the Michigan critic to become a member of her committee when a vacancy occurs.

Michener opened his attack by asserting that the committee report failed to explain adequately the lengthy bill and by protesting against the House acting on such legislation without knowing what it is about.

"This is the sort of thing that brings ridicule upon Congress," he complained.

Dirksen explained that the bill had been considered by a sub-committee at a previous session and that consequently he could not remember its details, but he called attention to its indorsement by local bar associations.

Action Termed Ususal.

He also pointed out that it is not unusual for House members to act upon bills which they know nothing about.

"We've got to accept some of this legislation on faith," he said.

Michener, obtaining five minutes from Dirksen, who controlled half the time for debate, shot back:

"Let us shun the day when Congress accepts the philosophy of the gentleman from Illinois.

"We've had a lot of trouble with District bills here. This bill is a perfect example of the reason why. The District Committee does not take its work seriously. It brings in bills it can't explain. Why have any committee at all?

"District Day should be a serious day. It corresponds to a session of the State Legislature in our home States."

"A Labor of Love."

Dirksen jumped up at the conclusion of Michener's rebuke and said:

"It might be a good idea for the gentleman from Michigan to serve on the District Committee. It is a labor of love. You don't get any votes back home for it."

He then explained that the committee tried to consult District officials and leading citizens before passing upon the scores of local bills and to act accordingly. He praised Chairman Norton for her "yeoman" service to the District, and the House applauded.

After the debate, Mrs. Norton attempted to get the 50-page bill passed without having it read.

"You'd better read the bill," interjected Michener.

As the clerk started, however, Michener took a glance around at the look of disgust upon the faces of his colleagues, and added:

"Inasmuch as no one knows anything about this bill and nobody has any amendments, I ask unanimous consent that the reading be dispensed with."

Other Bills Listed.

The other seven bills passed by the House provided:

An increase from $15,000 to $25,000 in the authorization for vocational rehabilitation of District residents. The naming of streets in the Mall for the States of Ohio Missouri, Oklahoma and Maine. Amendment of the weights and measures act to require that all coal sold in small packages be of the weights of 50, 25, or 15 pounds. A step-up in penalties for second and subsequent felony convictions. The bill, striking at habitual offenders, was recommended by the special District crime committee two years ago. Two classifications of detectives in the Metropolitan Police Department. An authorization of $500,000 for a new recorder of deeds building. Authority for Dr. Walter B. Hutton to take a healing arts examination.

D.C. Health Funds Insufficient For Basic Needs, Official Says

Dr. Seckinger Declares Appropriation Less Than Half Enough to Insure Minimum Standards Defined by Public Health Association.

Health funds for the District are less than half what they should be to insure Washington of having minimum standards of health protection as defined by the American Public Health Association.

Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, of the D. C. Health Department, emphasized this in a talk yesterday at the monthly meeting of the Council of Social Agencies at the Y. W. C. A.

"Our funds now amount to 95 cents per capita," he said. "For a city the size of Washington, we should have $1.96 per capita—a budget of $1,080,000, rather than one of $589,703, which is our present budget." Dr. Seckinger mentioned that the growth of the city in the last few years has added greatly to the burden of the Department, and said the high prevalence of venereal diseases had presented a special problem in the last decade. He said further that additions to the department had been made recently, including three physicians for the venereal disease clinic at which about 2,000 patients are treated each week.

A full-time director and two part-time assistants have been added to the maternity welfare service of the department, he said, "and we hope to set up a bureau of mental hygiene soon." The nursing bureau is sadly understaffed, he continued. "We now have 63 regular nurses. We need at least 300."

Public Health Service from the Federal point of view was discussed by Dr. Henry Holle, of the United States Health Department, who told how the $8,000,000 made available by Congress has been divided so as to do the most possible good. In some instances, he said, the money is divided on the basis of population; in others special health problems are taken into consideration, while in still others the basis per income per capita is the governing factor.

Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, president of the Council, presided at the meeting. He prefaced his introductions of the two speakers with a tribute to Dr. William A. White who died Sunday.

Mrs. W. A. Roberts, executive secretary of the council, said the board of directors had passed a motion declaring the special appeal by the hospitals had brought to public attention the fact that the health program is inadequate and existing health services are inadequately supported. Mrs. Roberts said, also, that two new members of the governing board of the Council of Social Agencies had been appointed to fill unexpired terms of members who formerly have served on the board. These are Miss Belle Sherwin and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

Reporting on the status of the child welfare survey, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, chairman of the child welfare division of the council, said it is now under way. Carried on under the direction of Dr. C. C. Carstens of the Child Welfare League of America, the survey aims to discover the needs of underprivileged children in the District. Mrs. Mrytle Louise Duckworth has charge of supplying data on District of Columbia institutions for children; Miss Catherine Chapman and Miss Elizabeth Coates are gathering material on local case-work service.

Navy Yard Will Drop 75 Additional Workers

About 75 PWA relief workers, employed at the local Navy Yard, will be released shortly, it was learned yesterday, due to lack of further funds. Most of them, however, will be transferred to the Anacostia Naval Air Station, to work on a dike under construction there.

The dismissals involved about 25 per cent of the total relief workers at the Navy Yard, and follow close on the announcement last week that 300 regular workers, machinists, will be dismissed for similar reasons about May 1. Rumors of additional lay-offs, due to decreased naval construction, have not been confirmed, awaiting Congressional action on Navy bills for new construction and repair.

House Group Ends Fiscal Study Today

Committee to Question Jacobs on Plan for Financing D. C.

The House sub-committee on District appropriations today will resume and conclude its executive hearings on the Jacobs report on fiscal relations between the Federal and District governments.

The sub-committee, sitting with a special group from the House District Committee, listened to George McAneny, president of the Title Guaranty Trust Co., New York, and chairman of the advisory committee, explain the first section of the report.

J. L. Jacobs, the director of the study, was not on the stand, but he will be questioned today.

Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, chairman of the special tax sub-committee of the District Committee, will make arrangements today to bring both McAneny and Jacobs before his group probably next week. These hearings will be open.

The other two members of the advisory committee, Clarence A. Dykstra, of Cincinnati, and James W. Martin, of Frankfort, Ky., were not present.

Among the guests of Chairman Ross Collins and the sub-committee also were Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, Auditor Daniel J. Donovan and George Lord and Thomas F. Murphy, both of whom have helped prepare previous fiscal reports on District-Federal relations.

Lord was an aide of the Mapes committee, which recommended $6,500,000 as the Federal payment, while Murphy worked for the U. S. Bureau of Efficiency, which proposed a $10,000,000 payment on the basis of Federal owned property and the excess of parks in Washington.

Collins declined to discuss the conference, but it is known he plans to settle the fiscal relations problem this week after consultations with his colleagues.

convention to hear reports from State leaders, and to listen to addresses by Maj. George L. Berry, president of the league; John L. Lewis, head of the Committee for Industrial Organization; Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers; Charles P. Howard, president of the International Typographical Union; A. F. Whitney, president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Senator La Follette.

In addition to this support, the President received in the course of the day a delegation of 16 representing farm organizations, who discussed the court proposal with him and then issued this statement:

"Farmers, as well as all other citizens, should properly assume that President Roosevelt—re-elected by the greatest majority in history—is generally better informed relative to the affairs and needs of this Nation than any other person.

"President Roosevelt has stanchly supported and advocated all farm legislation upon which agriculture could come in common agreement. Agriculture's greatest progress has been thwarted by the Supreme Court and we have found no effective substitute for that lost legislation.

"We believe in the President's ability and determination to preserve our democracy and, at the same time, improve the welfare of the masses. We reaffirm our faith in his leadership and will give him our full support."

A statement by the league delegation that visited President Roosevelt, issued at the White House, said the league was the first great national organization to come to the President's support "when he was under bitter attack from many groups" in the campaign. "Again we assume the same role," it continued, "and again our promise will be fulfilled.

At the morning session Berry said the President's program must be enacted to "save America." He said he doubted that the country survive another depression and that legislation to prevent another depression was necessary.

Edward F. McGrady, assistant Secretary of Labor, said the Supreme Court "had nullified the will of the people."

"If the country is to advance," he declared, "something must be done about this small group of men on the court who seized greater power than the President and Congress."

At the night session, Berry made a plea for farmer-labor co-operation declaring that "if the farmers and the laborers recognize their community of interest, the court program and any future program that may be agreed upon will be adopted."

He declared advocates of the court plan had at least two months' work ahead of them before it could be pushed through Congress.

M. W. Thatcher, leader of the farm group that had visited the White House earlier in the day, replied highly praising the President's program.

Municipal Judge Michael Mishmano, of Pittsburgh, spoke of the Supreme Court Building as a "mausoleum—the tomb of social leigslation." He spoke of the "dead hopes" of railroad men whose pension act was invalidated; the coal miners, who lost their Guffey coal act; the farmers, who had looked "for relief from crushing burdens," and the "decapitated child labor laws."

Excerpts From La Follette's Address on Court

Excerpts from speech of Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, to Labor's Nonpartisan League in defense of President Roosevelt's judiciary program:

When a majority of the highest court in the land, one of the three co-ordinate branches of the Federal Government, stubbornly clings to an outmoded philosophy which the people of the country have emphatically renounced, it is a threat to a functional democracy. These judges are the lame ducks of our courts. Their social philosophy has been repudiated by a new generation, but they hang on to their jobs by virtue of a life tenure in office provided by the Constitution and a long life.

Many universities require their teachers to retire at 65 or 70. Most corporations retire their executives in their sixties and retire their workers, without pensons, between 40 and 50. There seems to be little objection to applying the same principle to the lower Federal courts. Why not apply it to the Supreme Court?

The answer is that there are some people who fear that to do so will change the temper of the court's opinions. And I am here to state that I, for one, hope so. I am convinced that the American people, as a whole, share the same hope. We want a court that is in touch with the problems of this present generation, a court that will recognize the Constitution as a living instrument, a court that will stop using the Constitution as a means of preventing the legislative and executive branches of the Government from enacting legislation which a majority of the court is opposed to for economic and political reasons. The people want the right to solve their problems.

Interested in Results.

The American people are not fundamentally interested in theories. They are interested in results. The collapse of democratic governments in other countries should serve as a warning to those who really believe in that form of government. These governments were discarded because they were impotent. If a majority of the court is permitted to throttle the legislative branch of the Government and thus to block all effective means of meeting the grave economic problems of today, it can happen here.

The stalling of our Government by judicial fiat in recent years is not a defect in the Constitution. It is a defect in the Supreme Court. We do not need to amend the Constitution. It did not enact any particular economic system. Justice Holmes was once impelled to remark sarcastically that the fourteenth amendment did not enact Mr. Spencer's "Social Statics." I might add, "Neither did the Constitution." The Constitution is a flexible document prepared by men with a great vision who foresaw the need for allowing each generation the right to solve its own specific social problems. Edmund Randolph, who wrote the first and basic draft of the document, explained in the opening statement of his manuscript that it was his purpose "to insert essential principles only, lest the operations of government should be clogged by rendering those provisions permament and unalterable which ought to be accommodated to times and events."

Quotes His Father.

The need today is not to amend the Constitution, but rather to amend the Supreme Court. The court is both out of touch with the problems of twentieth century America and out of harmony with the Constitution. In its exercise of the judicial veto it has taken unto itself powers which it was never intended to have by the founders of our constitutional government.

Speaking at Madison Square Garden as an independent candidate for President in 1924 upon this great issue of judicial usurpation my father had this to say in part: "Always these decisions of the court are on the side of the wealthy and powerful and against the poor and weak whom it is the policy of the law-making branch of the Government to assist by enlightened and humanitarian legislation. * * *

"Now it is obvious that a remedy for this condition must be found. No government can long survive if through the medium of a king, a court or any other sovereign power the will of the people represented in the law-making branch of their government can be arbitrarily and finally defeated."

When the court again asserted its alleged power to declare the acts of Congress unconstitutional, it was in the Dred Scott case 50 years after Marbury vs. Madison. It took 4½ years of Civil War to settle the issue which the Dred Scott decision threw into the faces of the American people. Later when the court tried to assert this doctrine of judicial veto in the Legal Tender cases, President Grant appointed two new justices to the court, and the decision was reversed.

The idea of an unchecked veto power in the hands of the Supreme Court has been accepted only over the last 40 years. It has been built up by corporation lawyers who have tried to secure from the court protection for their special interests which they could not secure from the people of the country. It has been indoctrinated into our schools and forced into our thinking with the same deliberate direction as the propaganda of the public utilities. If Congress continues to yield to this false doctrine, it will betray the people into the hands of a judicial oligarchy governing for property rather than for humanity.

Congress a Guardian.

Congress is as much a guardian of the Constitution as the court. If in its own judgment Congress decides that it should have power which it does not have under the Constitution, it must seek those powers through amendment. But if it has certain powers under the Constitution, in justice to the people whom it represents Congress should never allow those powers to be surrendered. Congress cannot disturb a decision of the Supreme Court in a particular case, but Congress is not bound to submit to interpretations of the Constitution which denies it the constitutional rights to which it is definitely entitled.

President Roosevelt has proposed a way in which Congress can possibly secure from the Supreme Court a more sympathetic understanding of present-day problems and a greater appreciation of the purposes behind its legislation. It it a method entirely within the Constitution and definitely in keeping with the aims and spirit of democratic government.

The proposed reform is long overdue. It is unfortunate that it was not carried through many years before the present critical situation arose. But the acuteness of the present situation is all the stronger reason for immediate action.

This is not a struggle between the President and the court; it is a struggle between the representatives of the people responsible to them and a small group of justices who have lost touch with the problems of the people, are not responsible to them for their tenure of office, and have not the grace to step aside and let the present generation govern itself.

Do not be foiled by the crocodile tears shed by these reactionary defenders of a backward court in the name of civil liberties. Revolutionary changes come not from bad men but from bad social conditions and the impotence of governments to correct them. Those who hold our civil liberties dear should rally to support the President's proposal and thus preserve the fundamental principle of democratic self-government.

Amendments Urged.

There are a number of men in Congress who propose to settle this issue of judicial usurpation by a constitutional amendment. Some of them are sincere but misguided liberals whose intentions are worthy. I would favor for the future an amendment which would give Congress the power to override a decision of the Supreme Court if it declares an act of Congress unconstitutional. This would provide a more certain mechanism of restraining judicial power. But an amendment to the Constitution is too slow to be considered as an alternative to the President's program. We can and should consider it in addition to the President's suggestions. But in saying that I have no illusions about the amendment route. I venture the prediction that the amendment proposed by Senator Wheeler and others could not muster 30 votes in the Senate.

I am confident that if this question were to be put up to the American people tomorrow in a general plebescite, their answer would be an overwhelming indorsement of the President's proposals. For after all, the fundamental question is: Who shall rule this Nation, the people or the court? To my mind there can be only one answer. The Nation was established by the people and it is theirs to govern as their welfare will require. The court is simply an institution set up to do a specific job. When it fails to do that job as the people want it done, when it hinders rather than helps in the solution of social problems, it is the people's right and privilege to change it.

Our task at the present time is to make sure that the voice of the masses is not lost in the tumult raised by organized minorities. Special interests are protesting to Congress against President Roosevelt's plan for judicial reorganization, and they come with the hands of Jacob but with the voice of Esau. They claim to represent the sentiment of the people, but be not deceived. We must not confuse noise and activity with numbers. The special interests are both very noisy and exceedingly active, but the people have the numbers. And the people want to retain control of their own Government.

Zuloaga, Spanish Artist, Is Sentenced to Death

Lisbon, Portugal, March 8 (AP).—Gen. Gonzalo Queipo de Llano, in an insurgent broadcast from Seville, said today the famous Spanish painter Ignacio Zuloaga had been sentenced to death Sunday in government held Bilbao.

Ignacio Zuloaga, considered one of Spain's outstanding modern painters, has visited the United States several times and is represented in a number of American art collections. In 1925, four of Zuloaga's pictures were sold in New York for a total of $100,000.

of public funds to influence legislation, in an implied warning to Administration efforts in behalf of the court program. He said he called attention to the code "in view of the propaganda that already has taken place from some high officers of this Administration."

Clark's speech followed reports that Postmaster General Farley will speak in North Carolina today, and Secretary of Interior Ickes on Friday. Works Progress Administrator Harry L. Hopkins recently broadcast a radio indorsement of the President's objectives.

Charges of "propaganda" against the plan were renewed in the Senate by Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson, who was again challenged by court-plan opponents. In the House, the court debate broke out afresh, with Representatives David J. Lewis, of Maryland, and Harold D. Cooley, of North Carolina (Democrats), supporting the judiciary program, and Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat) of Georgia, opposing it.

In selecting the liberal Wheeler as the first witness against the grogram at hearings next Monday, the opposition gave the Montanan an opportunity to forward his counter proposal for a Constitutional amendment grating Congress authority to override Supreme Court invalidations by a two-thirds vote, with a Congressional election intervening. Wheeler has gained new strength for his plan by exempting the Bill of Rights from its provisions, and suggesting means of speeding up ratification.

Churchmen who later will be asked to appear against the President's proposals will include Archbishop Michael J. Curley, of the Catholic Church; Bishop William T. Manning, of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and Bishop Edgar Blake of the Methodist Episcopal Church, it was learned. Members of other Protestant faiths, and prominent leaders in American Jewry, also will be asked to testify in opposition.

Taber, of the National Grange, oldest farmers' organization, will follow Wheeler next Tuesday. The Grange, which opposes the court program, is the only national farmers organization on record, although the head of the Farmers Union National organization has personally opposed it. Individual units of the Farmers Union and the American Farm Bureau Federation have taken varied stands on the court plan.

Lemke, who will follow the farm witnesses, is coauthor of the Frazier-Lemke series of farm legislation, and was a third-party Presidential candidate in the last campaign. He is closely in harmony with the views of Father Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit.

Moley, former No. 1 member of the New Deal "brain trust," has been invited to testify on Thursday, March 18. He already has opposed the judiciary program publicly, charging that he vainly urged the Administration to submit a Constitutional amendment in 1935.

Others who are being considered as opposition witnesses, but have not yet been formally invited, include James Truslow Adams, the historian; Prof. Felix Frankfurter, of Harvard, and some newspaper publishers and columnists. Several others already had been scheduled to testify against the plan, including W. Cameron Forbes, former Governor-General of the Philippines and Ambassador to Japan. Forbes will appear with Maj. J. G. Phelps Stokes and Admiral Richard Pearson Hobson, of New York, as spokesmen for the Constitutional Democracy Association.

Following the Senate opposition conference yesterday, it was learned that Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, and Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, informally have been delegated to cross-question Attorney General Cummings and Jackson when testimony for the plan opens Monday.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Fine Wife of 'Ambitionless Sot' Is Loved by Man Who Wishes to Wed Her; He Asks What to Do.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I will state my case as briefly as possible and ask advice from you, for I have long respected the advice you give to others. I am going with a married woman at present, who is living with her husband. He has been untrue to her, and is an ambitionless sot satisfied to work for practically nothing so long as their combined salaries will support them. He claims to love her but does nothing to prove it. He won't stop drinking and won't try to get a better job. She has pleaded with him time after time, but he just won't try. She has done everything possible to hold the marriage together, but nothing succeeds. For a long time she has been thinking of leaving him, but just never has. She has no family, all her close relatives being dead, but is capable of supporting herself. She admits she would be better off without him.

* * * *

Her husband doesn't like children; she loves them. He doesn't want a home and a future; she does. He has absolutely no sense of responsibility and would spend every cent he made on liquor if she didn't get his money when he is sober. He wants nothing better than they have now, which is nothing. And she very definitely feels that she does not want to sacrifice her entire life to no avail, although she has stuck it out for a number of years hoping against hope that he would change.

* * * *

Here's the question: Should she leave him, knowing she and I could be happy and really build a future together and have a home with children, which we very much want? Or should she stick to him, knowing in the end when she is no longer attractive and can't very well find anyone else, that he will have made her life into nothing? I think I know human nature well enough to predict that he will never change. Even she admits she doesn't think there is a chance in a million that he will snap out of it and amount to something.

* * * *

I am not trying to "break up a home" in any sense of the word. But the girl herself is everything I have looked for all my life in a woman, and although I feel certain we could make a go of marriage and be happy—which would be her first real happiness—still I also know she would be better off without him. I might add here that there has never been anything wrong between us. Both of us feel that regardless of whether or not we marry, we wish always to think of each other, knowing we played the game as straight as possible under the circumstances, although I guess it isn't very straight to be going with another man's wife. Anything you can say to enlighten me will be appreciated. Z. S.

Forbidden Ground.

DEAR Z. S.: In this case I do not feel that I would be justified in discussing what attitude the wife should take toward her husband and her marriage unless the wife herself had written asking my analysis of her situation and my opinion as to what should be done. Anything so intimate as the martial relationship is forbidden ground into which strangers may not trespass with opinions and advice unless these are expressly solicited by one or the other of the two parties directly concerned.

* * * *

I sympathize with your concern for the girl. I believe you have stated the case with detached restraint. But I have no desire to comment on the marital difficulties of a couple neither of whom have asked my help. If you believe my opinion would carry weight with the wife, why not suggest to her that she submit her problem direct?

Girl Wantst Friends.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Perhaps you can help me. Mine is a problem of loneliness in a strange city. I have been working as housemaid in Washington for five months. My hometown is many miles from here. I live where I work. I find it hard to get acquainted here, especially when one does the work I do, where one is in the house all day without much chance of meeting people. I have several evenings off every week, as well as Sunday, but I don't know what to do with my free time. I hate to go out by myself at night. So I go to a show once in a while and the rest of the time I spend crying from loneliness.

* * * *

I am a girl of 18, considered very attractive in looks and dress and have always had a good character and pleasing disposition. I have many friends back home and always got along all right with them. I like to dance and sing and was always considered a good sport. I like to have a good time and am always full of fun. However, I do not drink or smoke. I sometimes wonder if I would get along better if I did. Do you think I am old-fashioned in not doing so?

* * * *

I would very much like to meet some girls and boys my own age who like to go to dances, movies, and so on. Can you tell me how I could become acquainted with such? . . . I think sometimes I will go mad if I don't soon find some companionship. I think what I really need is a boy who could be a pal, or a girl who could be a chum. If there are any boys or girls who feel as I do I would like very much to get in touch with them. Please advise me as soon as possible.

LONELY.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR LONELY: The local Y. W. C. A., at Seventeenth and K streets northwest, telephone MEtropolitan 2100, offers a varied and interesting social program for girls just like yourself. There is even a special clubroom where such girls meet on their Wednesday, Thursday or Friday afternoons off, and also on Sunday, afternoons. On certain Sundays (last Sunday was one of them), they have teas and musicales. Such entertainment is free, and girls are received just as any invited guest would be received at any social event. On certain Friday nights there are dances, to which both men and girls are asked, but these cost 50 cents per guest. Small fees are charged for enrollment in certain special activities, into the nature of which you may inquire.

* * * *

For full information, go to the "Y" and ask to talk to Miss Saida Hartman, who is in charge of the social program. She is in her office on Sunday afternoons, or it is possible you might obtain a special appointment for some week day evening by telephoning in advance, although this I cannot promise.

* * * *

It might be worth your while to join a church or a young people's church group, and it is just possible if you had given me your name and address that I could have put you in touch by letter with some other young girl equally lonely who would have made you a real chum. Not long ago a Washington professional woman introduced herself to me to say that her housemaid had formed a delightful friendship with another girl doing similar work, as a result of writing this column for friends. The first girl's letter was read by the second girl, who was equally lonely; they discovered each other's name and address and very promptly thereafter were spending most of their free time together, each happy in having a "best girl friend." I warn you, however, that I do not wish to shoulder the moral responsibility of putting you in contact, by correspondence, with strange young men. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

East Meets West in New Styling

The Javanese sarong has been modernized to furnish style interest for the bolero costume below, fashioned of Javanese batik. A little cap inspired by native head-dress has also been adapted to modern styling and adds a quaint touch to ensemble. It is a versatile outfit, equally appropriate for cocktails or spectator sports.

A unique evening gown of Javanese batik; the Oriental influence enhanced by the addition of a harem veil.

Famous Batik Pieces of Java Make Fashionable Garments

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

AN ORIENTAL ART has been adapted to modern style trends—Javanese batiks are being fashioned into daytime, evening, sports and beach clothes. The "Sarong" (analogous to the wrap-around skirt in the Western world) has been modified and made the style interest of a number of interesting costumes. A little cap taken from the native headdress lends additional Occidental atmosphere to the ensembles. All the materials have been hand-batiked in Java, using traditional colors and patterns as the focal points of interest. The collection was presented at an exclusive showing to fashion authorities in New York recently.

Interested in knowing the story behind this fascinating new fashion influence, I learned from E. E. Muhs, who was presenting the collection, the history of both the materials and the designing. Several years ago, when he was in Java, the native hand-craft, known as Batik, impressed him so much that a collection was made of fine Javanese pieces. Mme. Marge, a Hollywood fashion adviser, was appealed to for the designing of the costumes. She claimed the Javanese colorings were too monotonous for American women who like bright prints. After much experimenting, the Javanese were induced to vary from their age-old custom of brown tones and made patterns in red, white and blue. As a result, the designs were developed in striking color patterns and the extensive collection of Mme. Marge as shown in New York followed.

In making the batiks, Muhs explained, the natives take a piece of hand-woven cotton or flax, usually about 8 feet long and apply a design in colors indigenous to Javanese environment; brown, cream and deep blue. When this is completed it is used for their native sarong. The batik process means drawing or painting a design in wax on cloth, so that when dyed, only that part of the material which has not been covered by wax takes the color. The wax is applied to the cloth by means of a small copper container with a long slender spout called a "tjanting." For each color a separate application of wax is necessary—for both sides of the material; consequently, both sides of the finished piece are identical. The waxing produces a definite richness of color tone, which distinguishes batik from domestic prints.

Formerly, batiking was carried on chiefly by women of the leisure class in the same way as embroidery is done in some other countries. About 1860, a new method was introduced in which copper stamps (blocks) were used to apply the wax. By this method, sarongs could be waxed more rapidly—by the old method, it took a woman about 15 days to wax a single sarong. Sometimes a combination of the old batik and the newer stamping or blocking is used; for instance, central design of one process and border of the other.

Motifs in the manufacture of batiks are numerous—each having a history and Javanese name by which it is identified. Certain designs may be used by certain classes only, and those vary with the sections of the island on which they are produced. The sultan of a certain province could wear a sarong, the design of which no other persons, excepting his wives, would be permitted to employ.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

How Medicine Is Made Now.

YOU HAVE heard there is something good for what ails you and you go into a drug store and buy, we will say, a dozen capsules of it. You proceed to engulf these capsules, and take it as a matter of course that they seem to be doing the work.

Let me try to indicate for you how much is behind that apparently simple purchase of yours. Come with me to a large, modern factory manufacturing all sorts of therapeutic products.

In the particular case of your dozen capsules, you are using a set of medicines. And these are purchased and perhaps come from very different parts of the world—China, South America, California, etc. They arrive by express in the company's receiving room. Each package is immediately labeled, opened, a sample taken out and sent to the department of analytical chemistry. Before the package is moved to the storeroom, the analyst's report must indicate that it is what it purports to be, is pure and fresh.

From the storeroom of medicines so approved, the ingredients for your capsule are brought together and carefully weighed and carefully mixed.

Capsules Must Be Made.

Since the mixture goes into a capsule and capsules do not grow on trees, they have to be made. In some other part of the building the capsule manufacturing department is turning out gelatine capsules. In one such room which I visited the other day, 4,500,000 capsules a day are turned out by machines. The machines are composed of accurately measured dies, one the size of the body and one the size of the cap of a capsule. These, following along a rotating treadway, dip into a lake of liquid gelatin, move out through a drying trough, come back and are fitted together by machinery. The neatest trick of the week.

Collected in Container.

In another kind of a machine the capsules are opened again, filled with the mixture of your medicine, refitted together and collected in a container.

Now, finally, each one of these capsules is inspected, carefully weighed on scales at the inspector's side, which are constantly set up with the proper weight in the other beam so as to save time; they are polished with sterile cloths to get the dust off, bottled, labeled, and again checked, because on each bottle is a serial number showing where each ingredient came from.

This is a far cry from the old druggist who used to gether his own herbs and had no way of testing their potency, and laboriously rolled his own pills.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 11 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

Hollywood Shoulders.

They call those wide, padded shoulders for women "Hollywood Shoulders," because the Paris designers are easing off on them while the screen stylists say they are set for years and years.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, March 8.

A WANDERING PAL of mine, Virginia Cotier, who has been trouping the country with a popular play, has found traces of strange dance paroxysms in her travels. Have they met your eye? I wonder if they are going on right under mine here in Gotham.

ALICE HUGHES.

Virginia says she has heard reports that it is called "Jeep Dancing," and may be related in some way to the dances performed in the outlying sections of Havana.

She says that the dancers here join hands and do a sort of hopping sidewise jig that lasts for as long as ten minutes, after which the participants collapse from exhaustion. Their eyes are glued to the floor watching their partners' feet, and it is wearing even to watch. Virginia says she has seen a lot of this sort of thing going on, and she wonders about it.

* * * *

I do, too, as a form of national mania of a type. But far more important, in my life, is the daily stint and the life-and-death struggle with a case of ringworm on the scalp of a 5-year-old boy.

I simply refuse to fret about the "Jeep Dance" until I get that ringworm cleared up. How trifling such carryings-on seem compared with the struggle with stubborn, pig-headed bacteria!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—I visit the elegant Colony Restaurant at the luncheon hour and witness Mrs. William Woodward, in mink, and Mrs. Carroll Carstairs, in a three-quarter-length seal, and Mrs. Nino Losavio, in a stunning skunk coat, and I think what an amazingly beautiful and smart world it is, to be sure . . . And then, in my morning paper, I read that two "gentlewomen," quite evidently mother and daughter, had spent their last $3 for a tiny furnished room, had turned on the gas and had lain down to sleep forever . . . And I'm not so sure that it's so amazingly beautiful or smart . . . I know it can be heart-breaking . . .

It was nice to see George O'Brien and his actress-wife, Marguerite Churchill, together at the French Casino a few nights ago. Marguerite is playing the feminine lead in "And Now Good-by," and George came across country to see her open and spend a few days seeing her and doing the town with her. There's a pair that's really in love, out of moonstruck Hollywood! . . .

They tell me that the Palm Beach ladies nearly swoon when Gary Cooper makes an entrance at one of their evening affairs. Gary married a Park avenue girl, and the two are spending part of the winter at Hobe Sound, about 20 miles north of Palm Beach . . .

Mary Lewis, who is busy singing again in spite of her happy marriage to Bob Hague, has revived the ostrich feather fan to use in her stage work. Each is nearly five feet high—and there wouldn't be much visible of Mary if she tried to hide behind one. She has contrasting shades for all her gowns, too . . .

The untimely death of Nan O'Reilly, at 41, robbed our newspaper business of one of its brightest figures. Nan went to work on a newspaper here at 14—think of it! She became famous as a writer on golf, and for the past several years has covered all big tournaments for a local afternoon paper. Seven years ago she was married to Silas M. Newton, an oil man and well-known amateur golfer . . .

And now the movies have really snatched the last of our very famous models—Betty Wyman, first famed as the girl who reached for that sort of cigarette, and more lately under contract to a famous fur house. Betty has passed all her screen tests with A plusses, and will be seen in "Vogues of 1938."

Skull caps are the thing. Most returning voyagers seem to agree on that. They're worn well back on the head, and seem to fit in with casual clothes. Some good color combines I've noted—black with kelly, white or royal, brown with brown, kelly or tan.

How to Give Good Parties

A HOWLING SUCCESS your party will be—if you play Jolly Gestures. With every guest adding his share to the fun, no one can be bored.

Start this side-splitting game yourself with a ridiculous gesture. Stroke an imaginary beard and roll your eyes archly, or pretend to sing with operatic gestures. The person next to you must do just what you did, then go through the motions of pulling taffy, tweaking his nose, or making any other foolish gesture that occurs to him.

The next person must repeat, in the right order, the two gestures which already have been made and add one he's invented. And so on around the room. Anyone who forgets a gesture or muddles the order is "out." The game goes on hilariously until only one player is left. He wins the fur-lined cake tin!

After this, rest your guests' aching sides with a quiet game like Compliments. Call it Blarney at a St. Patrick's party.

The leader goes around collecting compliments for It who sits in a corner. "Someone says you have beautiful eyes," says the leader. "John?" asks It. "No, but someone else says you're a marvelous dancer." The game goes on until It guesses who made the flattering remark. The flatterer now takes It's place.

Our 40-page booklet, "Good Parties," shows you how to be the fun expert of your crowd. Suggests attractive, easy-to-fix food. Active and quiet games for holiday and birthday parties, anniversary celebrations, showers, church, club and school entertainments. Learn to entertain easily, inexpensively, merrily.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Good Parties," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Hat Brims Get Inning After Year of 'Crowns'

Hollywood—Hat brims have their inning. Last fall everyone was so concerned about the height of a hat's crown that it didn't make any particular difference to anyone whether the hat had a brim a foot wide or no brim at all. Now it's the width of the brim that keeps us amazed and gaping.

The other evening at the tennis matches Carole Lombard sallied in with Clark Gable while everyone blinked and looked again at the cartwheel proportions of the brim on Carole's shining brown straw hat. It dipped just a bit in front, but was unadorned except for a band since it topped off a tailored spectator's costume. Her suit of brown wool was made with a semi-fitted three-quarter-length coat and her slim skirt must have been close to 14 inches from the floor.

Pleasant HOMES

HE'S A BOOKISH little fellow who likes to draw and collect bugs and butterflies and tinker with radio and goodness knows what else.

So his mother writes for our advice about his room. She'd like to fix it up as comfortable as possible for him to work in.

"It's in the attic and so has quite a low ceiling. I'd like to decorate it so it won't appear too hot in summer. There's a lot of space—12 x 22—and has three dormer windows looking out on woods. For furniture I will use a studio couch, a desk and a book shelf. What else would you suggest?"

Would it be possible to have the walls covered with one of those wall boards that insulate at the same time? If so, it would certainly make the room a lot more comfortable in both summer and winter. And that's important since he spends a good deal of time there. We'd like the walls in a very light fresh green, then a red denim or sail cloth cover for the studio couch and white scrim curtains at the windows tied back so that they don't cut out any light or view. These can have a plaid gingham valance across the top if you like and tie backs of the same plaid. Use this plaid for the cushions on the studio couch, too—and if you like for a slip cover for an easy chair. It would probably be more practical to keep most of the floor surface bare—easier to clean. But a couple of throw size hooked rugs would be comfortable to go in front of the chest of drawers.

About furniture—he'll need, besides the things you've mentioned, an easy chair, a chest of drawers, a work table and a drawing board.

The rest will be up to him! He'll add pictures and ornaments to suit his own ideas, and they'll give the room a boyish charm of its own.

Taffeta Evening Frock.

Hollywood—Paper-thin taffeta of pale rose and crisp organza in a plum shade make up an exquisite evening frock for June Martel to wear to summer parties. The foundation skirt is taffeta, while the overdress, fashioned like a redingote with voluminous skirt, is of plum organza. A corsage of orchids on the shoulder melts right into the luscious tints of this gown.

Hors d' Oeuvres Answer to Vital Party Problem

A Little of This, a Little of That, Is Recipe of Ann Dvorak.

By Rebekah Blake.

WHEN you've invited more persons than you can seat comfortably in your small modern dining room and the serving of a full course dinner is an impossibility, hors d'oeuvres both hot and cold and cleverly contrived canapes are the answer.

Ann Dvorak, movie actress, has found that her guests much prefer large platters of these delicacies on informal occasions and has gained a reputation for herself as a perfect hostess, because her get-togethers are always successful.

"When you fit out a miniature smorgasbord table in Swedish fashion," says Ann, "just watch your guests cluster around. In fact, I defy you to pull them away!"

Ann has a plate of little hot meat balls in tomato sauce, a dish of marinated herring, several varieties of sardines and smoked fish, little sausages and a hot creamed dish of some sort for her more substantial fare. Flanking these are gayly colored pottery plates of canapes of all sorts, some of which are listed and described below.

Celery stuffed with Roquefort or cream cheese, cream cheese mixed with finely chopped chives and spread on tiny crackers, crisp bacon broken into peanut butter and spread on tiny toast squares, bacon wrapped around stuffed green olives, and hard cooked eggs stuffed with the mashed up yolk, which has been mixed with a little mayonnaise, mustard, Worcestershire sauce and chopped up anchovies.

A slight variation from the stuffed olive canapes mentioned above is an appetizer which is called olives in blankets. Ann heats large ripe olives in their own juice, removes the pits, and stuffs the cavities with minced onion. She wraps each olive in bacon and secures it with a tooth pick. She then places the olives under the broiler until the bacon is crisp and then puts two or three on rounds of toast, garnishing them with tartar sauce.

'Machine Sense' Important Thing To Teach Girls

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"CONSIDERING that it has been run by a woman, the machine seems to be in excellent condition."

It was the vacuum cleaner salesman speaking. It might just as well have been the agent for sewing-machines, or irons or ice-boxes, or a dozen other gadgets, or even the car.

Most women deal with machinery of some kind or another quite as much as most men, but where a boy is expected to be a practical mechanic, with at least some sense and experience in the care and handling of cars and engines of various kinds, such knowledge is seldom if ever expected of girls.

Even changing a tire, which under modern conditions is a comparatively simple job, is often beyond a woman, and she will sit at the side of the road looking helpless until some gullible man comes along and has pity on her. Machine sense she seems to lack entirely. She hears the complaint of an ailing mechanism and, when it finally refused to run any longer, at once blames the machine or its maker, when the fault may be hers for forgetting that motors need oil.

Kindness to machinery should be just as much a part of the training of girls as of boys. They should be taught that motors do not run on faith and hope, but need food and care just as surely as do animals.

A sewing machine is a good place to start training. Most girls learn early to run them. They should be taught how they are put together, how to care for them, and how to deal with their minor ailments.

If girls are to enjoy the pleasures and conveniences of mechanization, some of the labor which it entails might fall justly to their share also.

Matter of Silhouettes.

The peasant and the princess walk side by side in this democratic world. It's all because they present two of the most popular silhouettes of the season.

THE WASHINGTON SCENE

By the Poe Sisters.

Washington is looking forward to a visit from Countess Andre Zichy, noted European portrait painter who is related to Count Laszlo Szechenyi, one-time Hungarian minister to Washington, now envoy to the Court of St. James.

The Countess has been in the United States with Count Zichy for some months, staying for the most part in New York. In late April, they will sail for Hungary to pass the summer near Budapest where they have a shooting box. While in Hungary, doubtless they will see Count and Countess Szechenyi, who have a handsome estate there where they usually pass part of the spring and summer. American society is hoping that the Szechenyis will come to Newport as they did last year for some of the summer season.

Countess Zichy recently completed three portraits in oil of well known Americans, including one of Miss Margery P. Stoddard, one of Miss Lucy G. Hutchinson and a striking portrait of Mr. Lawrence Smith Butler, all of New York.

Americans galore are planning coronation parties for early in May. A former Washingtonian certain to be in the foreground as the guest of an English Duke is Mrs. George D. Hope, whose party will be entertained lavishly during its stay in the British capital. Naturally, Mrs. Hope has a special interest in this coronation, for she is a friend of the present King and his Queen, whom she has entertained in her London home and who, in turn, have entertained her. Mrs. Hope's presence on a committee for the Queen's Hospital for Crippled Children began her friendship with the Queen. It is remembered here that Mrs. Hope is a poet of no mean ability and fond of describing the passing social show in verse.

When she visits Washington after the coronation, her friends, no doubt, will be privileged to read some striking stanzas dealing with that historic event.

Friends of Gov. and Mrs. Lawrence Cramer regret that the official business which brought them to Washington is nearly completed and that they will be returning to the Governor's mansion very soon. They are as popular here as they are in the islands, and Mrs. Cramer is "Aileen" to many Washingtonians. She is very pretty and always smartly dressed. She likes to design her own clothes and has many of them made by native dressmakers under her instruction. Interesting visitors from all over the world "stop in" at the Virgin Islands, and Gov. and Mrs. Cramer entertain constantly. Mrs. Cramer is an artist of ability and has painted some delightful views of the islands. She has also done some very creditable work in sculpture, although her duties as First Lady of the Virgin Islands do not allow her as much time as she would like to pursue her art.

A number of guests from this city will go to Baltimore tomorrow to attend the tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Kemp Malone for Mrs. Angela Margaret Mackail Thirkell, granddaughter of Burne-Jones, English artist. Mrs. Thirkell is the guest in Baltimore of Mrs. Rupert Norton, daughter-in-law of the late Charles E. Norton, of Harvard.

Mrs. Thirkell herself is an author, and among her books are "August Folly" and "High Rising," her latest volume.

On leaving the United States Mrs. Thirkell will go to Canada to stay with the governor general, Lord Tweedsmuir, and Lary Tweedsmuir.

A Nation-wide institute of the National Council will be held at Essex House, New York City, March 22, with the particular field to be covered at this time to be membership and publicity. Round-table discussion, panels, typical skits, clinics, a luncheon session, poster and scrapbook exhibit and the like will feature the day's session. Washington will be represented by more than ten ladies of the local group.

Study groups for the month of March are announced as follows: Tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock, music appreciation group meets in the vestry rooms of the Washington Hebrew Congregation, with Nathan Weinberg, lecturer, and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, chairman; March 15, the contemporary Jewish affairs group meets at luncheon at Harvey's at noon; speaker to be announced; Mrs. Lawrence Koenigsberger, chairman; March 21, from 3 to 5, there will be open house and reception at the Juanita K. The theme the "Business Woman as a Citizen Stands for Team Work for Social Progress" has been selected by the National Federation of Business and Professional Women for March. This is in line with the development of the study subject, "The Business Woman as a Citizen," which is being emphasized by this group this year. It evidently is meeting with general interest, for the membership chairman of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Miss Sarah M. Postlethwaite announces a gain of 2,810 new members for the first six months of this fiscal year over the same period last year.

On July 7, 1931, the federation adopted as their ten-year objective this goal, "During the next decade the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, incorporated, should fit itself to assume real leadership in thinking on economic problem, and their social implications, with a view toward helping in the establishment, through scientific methods, of conditions which assure to women, and to men as well, the fullest possible opportunity and reward, for the development of whatever capacities they may possess."

Miss Kathryn H. Starbuck, Skidmore College, who acts as national chairman of international relations committee commenting on what has been accomplished in the first five years, said: "I do feel very enthusiastic about the progress the federation has made. We have literature as good as materials published by educational institutions. Those surveys which we have published in cooperation with colleges, universities and in one instance the United States Department of Labor, are authoritative material, widely used outside of our own membership. We haven't bragged about that fact as much as we should. We have not made that material sufficiently well known to our members and to people outside our membership. That is something again that can be carried forward in the next five years.

ROMANTIC OVERTONE . . .

An inspiration from the age of romanticism and intrigue . . . recalling the artful Borgia, seductive—two-faced—femme fatale of the Renaissance. The high front in today's high fashion, while the pattern is chic and distinctive with its "dual personality" . . . half gabardine, half patent.

Signora Olivia Agresti, Italian Lecturer, Center of Capital Functions; Is Honored at Luncheon, Italian-American Society Tea and Embassy Dinner

Distinguished Visitor Speaks on 'Historical Development of Gardens and Fountains;' Introduced by Col. McClellan.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Signora Olivia Rossetti Agresti, distinguished Italian woman lecturer, was the center around which entertaining in the Capital revolved yesterday. There was first the luncheon at the Carlton, given by the National Farm and Garden Association, with Donna Matilde de Suvich, wife of the Italian Ambassador, as ranking guest; then the tea of the Italy-America Society at the Mayflower, where Donna Matilde and the Ambassador were again present, and finally the dinner which they gave in honor of Signora Agresti at the embassy last night.

Signora Agresti has been the guest over the week-end of Miss Janet Richards, who for 30 years has held a place in this country as a leader in the field of women lecturers such as the guest holds in Italy. Their friendship, of years standing, has been strengthened by the fact that their analyses of world events have nearly always coincided. "She is my counselor, guide and friend," said Signora Agresti yesterday, as she stood with Miss Richards and a group of friends.

The luncheon of the Farm and Garden Association was held in El Patio at the Carlton. A large horseshoe table, at which the 60 guests were seated, was decorated with large bowls of red and white tulips, jonquils and purple iris. In addition to Signora Agresti and Donna Matilde de Suvich, there were at the head table Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Secretary of Agriculture, and Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce, who are honorary members of the association, and Mrs. Howard W. Lewis, of Philadelphia, president of the national group.

Italy-America Society Meets In Ballroom of the Mayflower

The meeting of the Italy-America Society was held later in the afternoon in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel. The east end was screened off and the tea table set there, while the front of the room, with the stage, was used for the lecture. Signora Agresti spoke on "The Historical Development of Italian Gardens and Fountains," illustrating her lecture with slides.

She had changed from the blue print frock with a small white flower design, which she wore at the luncheon, to a black gown of heavy satin, made with a short jacket over a blouse of apple green, and a full skirt with a short train. Her small, pointed hat had a brief veil around the front.

Col. George B. McClellan presented her to the audience as an old friend, for she had addressed the society at one of its meetings last season. At that time she spoke on world affairs, which is a subject on which she is also an authority.

Before the hour of the lecture, Col. McClellan and the Italian Ambassador were visiting together in the hotel lobby. Miss Richards was one of the early arrivals and sat on the front row near the Ambassador and Donna Matilde de Suvich. The latter wore a brown costume, her small peaked felt hat matching her suit, which was trimmed in mink. Miss Richards was in black, with a band of trimming in a poppy design inserted in the sleeves.

Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose was also in the front row. Mrs. James G. Wentz chose one of the boxes, and was accompanied by Mrs. Frank Bell, of New Rochelle, N. Y., who has been her guest for two weeks and returns home today, and Mrs. Charles W. Beers. Mrs. Wentz has had her niece, Mrs. Roland Jackson, of Orange, N. J., with her over the week-end also.

Mrs. Redfield Vose Leaves Soon To Prepare for Summer in Europe

She and Mrs. Redfield Vose, after the lecture, were discussing over their teacups their plans for going to Europe soon. Mrs. Vose, who has been here for several weeks and has been entertained at many parties during her stay, is returning to New York the last week in March and will sail aboard the Normandy in May for her customary summer abroad. Mrs. Wentz expects to go sooner and to attend the coronation.

She was gowned yesterday in plum-colored velvet with a felt hat of corresponding shade. Mrs. Vose wore a gown of blue and silver lame with a small blue velvet hat edged with blue flowers, on her white hair and trimmed with a sheer, flaring veil.

Mrs. Vose was a guest yesterday of Mrs. Arthur Wright, who also had in her party Mrs. Strickland Gillilan, Mrs. Stewart Walker and Mrs. Benjamin Smith. Among others there were Dr. and Mrs. Nelson H. Darton, Baroness von Below, in a hat and gown of purple velvet; the Air and Military Attache of the Italian Embassy, Lieut. Col. Vincenzo Coppola, the Counselor for Immigration, Signor Eugenio Bonardelli; Senor Don Sebastian Valverde, of the Dominican Legation; Mrs. Louise Schapiro, Mr. Charles Mason Remey, accompanied by his sister; Maj. Louis R. Regan, Mrs. A. F. Busick, Mrs. Harllee Branch, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, Mrs. Mattie Wyatt Porter, Miss Meta Evans, secretary of the Italy-America Society; Mrs. Ralph Church and Mrs. Ernest Daniels.

Signora Agresti, who has been on an extensive lecture tour of the Pacific Coast and Midwest, came here from Chicago by plane and expects to return there for other lecture engagements before sailing for Italy later this month.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Y. Taylor are receiving congratulations on the birth of a daughter, born last Friday. Mr. Taylor is the son of Mrs. Taylor and the late Gen. Harry Taylor, former chief of the Army Engineers. Mrs. Taylor is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kelsey Boss.

Mme. Franges, the former Miss Justine Corby, was married to Dr. Franges December 7 at the home of her parents. The couple sailed immediately for Belgrade where Dr. Franges, former secretary of the Legation of Yugoslavia here, is now on duty at the foreign office.

Jonkheer Dr. and Mme. Frans van Reigersberg Versluys have arrived in Washington from Holland for several weeks' stay and have taken an apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street. Jonkheer Versluys is here on a special mission.

150 Expected to Attend Dinner Dance For Debutantes in Capital April 17

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman has announced April 17 as the date for the debutantes' dinner dance at the National Woman's Country Club. The party was given originally under the sponsorship of a committee which Mrs. Tuckerman headed eight years ago and has been held each year since under her direction.

Debutantes of the past season are included in the guest list and the ball is a gay aftermath of the year in which they have made their bow. About 150 usually attend the dance, for which invitations will be issued within the next two weeks. In addition to the debutantes of the Capital there will be those from Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York who have come out this year. Mrs. Tuckerman's committee, which she has not yet completed, will include, as it did last spring, prominent members from other cities from which guests will come.

Last year Mrs. John W. Davidge, Mrs. Archibald Davis, Mrs. Demarest Lloyd, Mrs. Russell Sard, Mrs. John Philip Hill, and, from the Diplomatic Corps, Mme. Alfaro, wife of the former President of Cuba, comprised the Washington committee.

Among those from out of town who came for the affair were Mrs. Richard Derby, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Edith Derby; Mrs. Eliot Tuckerman, with her daughter, Miss Emily Tuckerman; Mrs. Howland S. Davis, Mrs. Francis K. Stevens and Mrs. Junius Morgan, with their daughters, from New York City.

Miss Alice Noel Tuckerman, who made her debut this year, is the fourth daughter Mrs. Tuckerman has introduced to Washington society, and she has been equally popular in Baltimore and Philadelphia.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

That trio we used to see so many places together last year here in Washington—is once again together this time down in Cuba. Before C. Freitas-Valle left Washington for his new post down in South America, he and the John Caswells were practically inseparable. Now, settled in Havana, as Brazil's Minister, the popular diplomat is starting in on his round of entertaining and among his very first guests are the Caswells. They left Washington several days ago and by now are enjoying the delightfully lazy life that one follows in the island republic.

Kersley Caldwell, despite her crowded hours, has found time to go shopping, at least judging from her newest spring outfit. The frock of dark blue crepe is liberally sprinkled with clusters of bright little flowers. With this she wears a wee scrap of a hat of matching straw that sits way back on the head and is trimmed with two perky little bows in the front.

Peggy Wheeler, after a very busy winter here has taken herself down to Fort Sam Houston, Tex., where she will spend some time with the Bruce Scotts. What a whirl of a good time she will have at the Army post!

That busy young barrister, Lyle O'Rourke, was hustling up Eighteenth street yesterday jauntily sporting a new top coat and utterly unmindful of the still chilly breezes.

* * * *

Rastko Petrovic, sitting comfortably back in his copper-colored roadster, bowed and smiled as he drove on his leisurely way up Connecticut avenue after finishing up his day's duties at the Yugoslavian Legation.

A very merry luncheon foursome at the Pall Mall Room of the Raleigh included Mr. and Mrs. Ray Middleton, Helen Howison and Bernice Howison, all from that quaint spot, Fairfax. Mrs. Middleton was in all black.

Her hat was a small and very becoming turban model. To complete the outfit she wore a handsome strand of pearls, and a diamond and sapphire bracelet.

Helen Howison chose brown for her costume, her frock fastening with gold buttons and the brim of her hat turned up on one side. Her sister was in black, her hat trimmed with a silver buckle.

These afternoons (so far) have been ideal times for motoring through the country, and all of those lucky enough have deserted the crowded city streets, seeking out rustic taverns for tea or early supper before returning to the realm of bright lights. Cars seem to take on the personalities of their owners and are recognizable because of that—so we think. Saw a familiar looking roadster approaching over the top of a nearby hill out in Maryland and we were not so very surprised when we caught a whizzing glimpse of Arthur Clephane at the wheel as he sped by.

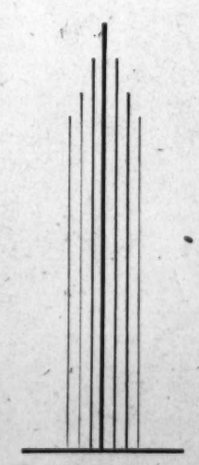
In Automobile Language 'Packing' and 'Kick-Backs'



The appearance of this advertisement in these columns is evidence that The Washington Post cooperates with and supports the Better Business Bureau for your protection.

The first term, "packing," is the practice employed by some automobile sharks who allow you too much for your old car. They "pack" the finance charges to such an extent that, although your old car is traded in at a very high figure, you are actually paying much more for the new car than you would have to if you had bought it from a reputable dealer.

The "kick-back" is the repayment the finance company discounting your contract makes to the dealer who overpaid you for your old car. This is the way the unscrupulous dealer evens his account without letting you know that he is anything but a philanthropic person anxious to make your dollars go farther.

The Better Business Bureau feels that you are entitled to FACTS. When you intend to take months to pay for a car, get the facts. Determine the remaining cash balance—get an itemized list of all the charges in the deferred payment arrangement—look at the difference between the cash balance and the total of the deferred payment account, and be satisfied before you sign the contract, that you're willing to pay that much for the accommodation of getting a large allowance for your old car and taking months to pay the indebtedness.

Perhaps the most sesuous in its Terpischorean interludes and the most ribald in the dual implications of the double entedre of its dialogue of any of the musical gaucheries that have come along to the Capital in the last few seasons, this Dwight Deere Wiman hit of a long Broadway season last night won the unstinted approval of a large and representative audience in the National Theater.

There are many reasons for this enthusiastic acclaim. The lines never become so suggestive as to arouse the antagonism of liberal tastes; the music has a lilt, a syncopated rhythm and a verve that are rarely encountered and the principals have been chosen with an uncommonly acute sense of judgment.

There are movement, excitement, color and a kaleidoscopic succession of 13 scenes in the two acts of this keen satire on the ballet school of dancing, as well as upon all other schools that play a part in the rhythmic and physical expression of "art."

Tragedy Is Averted.

The junior member of an old-time vaudeville team of "hoofers" becomes, through no particular fault of his own, a renowned star of the highest forms of artistry as it is expressed in bodily grace and choreographic skill. He finds himself, finally, in a spot where he is about to be shot down from a stage bix by a brace of gangsters hired by a jealous rival for that express purpose. This, happily, is circumvented by an alert police force, but not before a considerable degree of suspense has been generated.

But the basic motive of "On Your Toes" is not to supply an evening of tragic import, but to afford two and a half hours of undiluted popular entertainment in the form of catchy tunes, spirited solo dances and ensembles and slightly bizarre "situations" that always carry the suggestion that all may not be well with the ethical and moral viewpoints of those involved. From the standpoint of realistic drama, it is all pretty silly. From the point of view of hilarious diversion, spiced with snappy lines, tuneful melodies and every known sort of dancing, it is a masterpiece of ingenious invention.

I should say that in the 13 scenes of the two acts there are at least seven numbers that deserve to be remembered beyond the moment of the lowering of the final curtain. They are "It's Got To Be Love," sung by Doris Carson and Ray Bolger; "Two Good for the Average Than the Eye," by Miss Gear and Monty Woolley; "There's A Small Hotel," sung by Bolger and Miss Carson, and "The Heart Is Quicker Than the Eye," by Miss Gear and Mr. Bolger, in the first act, and "Quiet Night," by Guy Stanion; "On Your Toes," done by Miss Carson, Bolger and David Morris, and "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue," the ballet in which Bolger, Tamara Geva, Miss Carson and ensemble take part. These are memorable.

And not be omitted from these tabulations of notable numbers is the first-act finale, "La Princesse Zenobia" ballet—burlesqued, but still of sufficient fiber to be worth mentioning as an example of studious foolery.

Bolger Does Long Routine.

The whole thing is run off in rapid and artistic fashion, with no pauses worth mentioning between scenes and with many stage pictures of beauty presenting themselves, from time to time, as the plot progresses to its exhausting climax. Exhausting, I mean, for the participants in it—not the audience. In the "Slaughter on Tenth avenue" ballet, Ray Bolger executes a dance routine that is approximately 20 minutes in length and is limp at its end.

This Ray Bolger, by the way, has emerged as a fellow who can play a part consistently and well since Washington last saw him merely in the role of a "hoofer"—"Scandals," "Vanities" and "The Great Ziegfeld," on the screen. It is no wonder that he has been requisitioned by Hollywood at a price of $1,000,000 for his next five years' services. He is worth it. However, he does not carry the entire burden of "On Your Toes." He has able associates to lessen his load.

Luella Gear, sterling comedienne, has not half enough to do, but does what she has extremely well, and Tamara Geva demonstrates in what good stead training with the Imperial Russian School of Russian ballet stands one in the assumption of such a role as she has in her present assignment. Monty Woolley, former Yale professor, does a noble job in the role of Sergei Alexandrovitch, ballet master, and David Morris is fine as the young composer whose creations finally get a hearing and a performance. Demetrios Vilan does well with the minor role of Morrosine, envious dancer who attempts to promote a homicide, and the remainder of the cast and all of the comely chorus contribute generously to the success of the sprightly work conceived by Lorenz and Hart and George Abbott, who contrived the book, score and lyrics of the piece.

To those confronted with income taxes, mortgages, bank notes and similar incumbrances, I suggest "On Your Toes" as a happy antidote.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

A New Feminine Pulse-Quickener Comes to Screen At RKO-Keith's Tomorrow in 'Soldier and the Lady'

Anton Walbrook, Starred in Role of Michael Strogoff, Courier of Czar, Will Flutter Susceptible Hearts Like Robert Taylor, Tyrone Power, Errol Flynn, et al.; Price Corrections for 'Jane Eyre,' at National March 22; Hayden to Be Feted by Musicians at Shoreham; News Notes and Gossip of the Contemporary Theater and Its People.

WITH the coming of "The Soldier and the Lady" to the screen of RKO-Keith's tomorrow, there will emerge from the ranks of comparative obscurity a young leading man who is expected to take his place with the Errol Flynns, the Tyrone Powers and the other gifted young actors of the American screen who have come to eminence during the past year.

BELL.

This dynamic and handsome young actor is one Anton Walbrook, who executes a more or less flamboyant and swashbuckling role with conspicuous gallantry, vibrance and dramatic fire. Mr. Walbrook has appeared in foreign-made films, but this, to the best of my knowledge and belief, is the first time he will have been seen in an American picture. More of this a little later on.

"The Soldier and the Lady" is a celluloid transcript of Jules Verne's tempestuous tale of Michael Strogoff, courier of the Czar of all the Russias, who was commissioned to thwart the ominous threat of Ogareff and his attacking hordes. In the course of his official duties, Strogoff fell afoul of the sinister fascinations of Zangarra, a spy, who betrayed him into the hands of the general he was assigned to discomfit, and then repented. There is, of course, a tremendously moving romantic element of drama developed from this ramification of plot.

Walbrook plays this role with an intensity, a free-swinging breadth of attack and a believable naturalness, withal, that mark him as one to watch for future aggrandizement before the cameras.

The entire value of the film, however, does not repose in the provocative endowments of Mr. Walbrook, who seems destined to become one of the chief objects of interest of the idol-worshipers—at least the matinee idol-worshipers. There are others in the cast who bring to their roles the authority of long experience on the silver sheet.

Foremost among these are Margot Grahame, appropriately cast as the beautiful spy; Elizabeth Allan, Akim Tamiroff, Fay Bainter, Eric Blore, Edward Brophy and a considerable list of others.

Without at all undertaking a formal review of the picture before its opening at Keith's tomorrow, one may, perhaps, recall to the theater-going mind something of the past associations of these pivotal players. Elizabeth Allan was the nurse with Clark Gable in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Pulitzer prize-winning play of "Men in White;" Akim Tamiroff was the forbidding threat with Gary Cooper in "The General Died at Dawn;" Margot Grahame made her American cinema debut with Victor McLaglen in "The Informer;" Fay Bainter was last seen in Washington as leading woman with Walter Huston in Max Gordon's stage production of "Dodsworth," in which she played the role of the wife, and Eric Blore, needless to say, you remember from his appearance with Edward Arnold in "Diamond Jim," as the butler with Robert Montgomery in "Piccadilly Jim" and numerous other ace assignments. Ed Brophy has been around for years, doing secondary, but effective, service as a roughneck comic of various types.

Altogether, I should say that "The Soldier and the Lady" bids fair to take its rightful place with such screen hits as "The Charge of the Light Brigade," "Green Light," "Lloyds of London" and the other recent releases that have given evidence of the cinema's increasing tendency to concern itself with dramatic subject matter that may be relied upon to engage the interest of adult intelligence in features that are as adventurous as they are soundly and convincingly authentic.

It is interesting to note, in passing, that the filmed story of Michael Strogoff introduces battle scenes that are the last word in thrilling and thunderous action. One is given to believe from reliable sources that these pulse-tingling sequences have been dovetailed with the American-made scenes of the picture from a foreign-made film in which Walbrook also was the star. The "dubbing in" has been so skillfully done that you never would have known about it if I hadn't told you.

Local musicians are planning a personal and tuneful tribute to A. C. Hayden, to be held in the west ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel on Tuesday, March 16, from 5 to 8 p. m., in celebration of Mr. Hayden's thirtieth anniversary as president of the Musicians Protective Union of the A. F. of M.

At this buffet reception leading maestros will take turns in conducting an orchestra especially assembled for the occasion. The rotated leaders will include Sidney, of the Mayflower; Meyer Davis, Leon Brusiloff, Barnee, of the Shoreham; Meyer Goldman, one of the Capital's veterans, and Johnny Slaughter. It is expected that some 800 musicians and their families and friends will be present.

Honored guests invited to the testimonial include Joseph Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians; Gen. Samuel T. Ansell, general counsel of the A. F. of M.; John Locher, president of the Central Labor Union, and John B. Colpoys, United States marshal and publisher of the Trades Unionist.

I have known Al Hayden ever since those remote days when he used to saw a bull fiddle out at Chevy Chase Lake and later at Tom Moore's Garden Theater, and always have had the utmost respect for his patient ability as an executive of inestimable value to the organization he has served so long. Congratulations and best wishes for another 30 years.

There is need of a slight correction of erroneous announcements made with regard to the prices to be assessed for the matinee performances of Katharine Hepburn in "Jane Eyre," opening at the National Theater the week of March 22. The top tariff for the Wednesday and Saturday matinees of this Theater Guild production will be $2.20 instead of the mistaken $2.75 that has been made public through error.

Washingtonians desirous of marveling at the uncanny performance of Bozo, "the mind-reading dog," will have their last opportunity to witness this canine phenomenon at Sidney Lust's Arcade Theater, in Hyattsville, Md., tonight at 8:30, according to phone call from Manager Dave Ginsberg just received. After tonight's single appearance at the Arcade, Bozo will embark—the "bark" part, at least, is good—on a tour that will keep him on the road for two or three years. Being seven years old now, Bozo probably never again will make a public appearance in or near Washington. So now you know.

Welcome-Home Note.

So Leon Navara is coming back to headline the stage bill at the Earle Theater, where long ago he was prevalent for a considerable period. Navara master of services exactly like him, if that isn't too hot to handle!

Culbertson on Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

A Shameful Error.

We have all experienced the tragedy, as a defender, of having our own high trump honor fall on the same trick with that of our partner, and surely there is no contretemps at the bridge table that can make us feel quite so silly. In rare instances it is difficult to avoid this catastrophe, but usually it is the result of pure panic. In today's hand there was no excuse whatsoever for West's fatal play.

South, dealer.
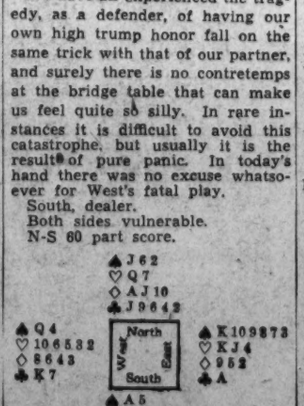
N-S 60 part score.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	Pass	2 ♣	2 ♠
3 ♣	Pass	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the spade Queen, which declarer won. A low trump was now led toward dummy, and West, panicky lest he lose his King of trumps, clattered up with it, only to have it smothered by his own partner's Ace. After that the defenders could take only one spade and a heart, and thus the rubber was lost.

Elementary reasoning on West's part could have resulted in the contract's defeat. The declarer's play of a low trump toward dummy had been indisputable evidence that he lacked the Ace. West had not doubled the four club contract, and thus there was no reason for declarer to place him with the King. If West had doubled, declarer with five to the Ace-Queen might make the "trap" play of a low club, hoping that West would stay off through fear of his partner's holding the blank Ace. But since there had been no double, it would have been the height of folly for declarer to have played away from his Ace-Queen. With such a holding he certainly would have entered dummy and finessed against the King. With five to the Ace, he would have laid down the Ace. The low club lead therefore proved that East, and not declarer held the club Ace.

In the final analysis, the knowledge of what declarer would or would not do with certain holdings is a defender's chart.

Ray Bolger, probably the legitimate successor of the late Jack Donohue as the contemporary theater's most eccentric "hoofer," and Doris Carson, one of the more talented of the stage's beauties, pictured above, appear in roles of prime importance in Dwight Deere Wimgn's production of "On Your Toes," which opened a week's engagement in the National Theater last night. Luella Gear, Tamara Geva and Monty Woolley are other important members of the cast.

With JIMMY FIDDLER

HOLLYWOOD, March 8.

Every time I see an up-and-coming new actor of the "pretty boy" type going tilt-nose because his pay check is multiplied to a grand a week, I feel like acquainting him with Buck Jones. Buck's story might surprise a lot of people. Most fans have a notion that the drawing-room-drama boys, such as Gable, Taylor and Montgomery, squeeze most of the high salaries out of the industry. How wrong they are! Poor old Jones, lowly cowboy, pays income tax on half a million dollars annually. And he has been piling it up for more years than three times Mamma Dionne's quintuplets. Each picture he stars in brings him $50,000 and 10 per cent of gross profits.

MARY ASTOR.

Don't think for a minute that so-called "horse operas" are not box office mints for the producers. More than three million youngsters who belong to the Buck Jones Club (they get lapel buttons and everything) assure his worst picture of neat profit. Jones himself is head man of two companies: Buck Jones Corporation, and the Silver Buck Corporation. Into the former goes profits from the star's pictures. The latter corporation accumulates the profits from sideline endeavors, such as endorsements, Buck Jones cowboy outfits, Buck Jones cap pistols and the like.

Studio sound men are saying that Ann Sothern can whip out more words per minute than Flóyd Gibbons. They claim she set an all-time high in speedy dialogue the other day when she played a quarrel scene with Robert Young, a scene in which she was instructed to "rattle it off." Rattle it off she did, too; 152 words in 26 seconds. "She's one woman," clipped Young, "who will always have the last 50 words."

A stationery counter girl in the supply shop off Cahuenga looks so much like Virginia Bruce, she may get a stand-in offer. Street laugh: One of Doris Dudley's dogs jumped out, and when she opened the door to give chase, three others followed, and traffic was jammed. Mae West is a sure comer when a new perfume shop opens. Nelson Eddy orders his pet horsey cologne by the gallon-size bottle. Lucky that Jean Harlow is easily recognizable, for she never carries money, and she always says "Charge it." Can I ever forget the look of chagrin on that ever-so-famous lady's face when she went to try on shoes, and had a hole in her stocking!

'Parnell' Opens At the Belasco For Single Week

Leona Powers Plays Lead in Drama of Ireland, a Broadway Hit.

A just and shining pride should beam over the faces of the Belasco management this week. For in "Parnell," the Belasco performs the service of bringing to Washington one of the finest plays of the year with spirited and talented performers. They fascinated last night's audience with their portral of the tragic and heroic story of Parnell, the great Irish patriot, who has become a legend within a generation.

Parnell embodied Ireland not only in his patriotism and devotion but also in a whole-hearted readiness to toss his cap over the windmill in the cause of love. The affaire Parnell reminds one, somehow, of a more recent and more world-shaking embroglio. For that strange thing called love, he, too, willingly tossed over a great career—and a career he had carved out for himself, not fallen into by accident of birth.

Certain aspects of the play are startling, especially that of Capt. O'Shea making a mistress of his wife's married sister. But life is like that. Or so they say. The play deals rather roughly also with the venerable Gladstone, who is variously referred to as the "old dog-fox" and a "spider" and who acts like both.

Leona Powers, who has made Washington happier many times before, presents a delicately shaded and skillful impression of Katherine O'Shea. Perhaps the best way to describe Miss Powers is to say that she is an actress who not only knows her business thoroughly, but imbues her roles with sympathetic understanding.

Parnell is played with power by Albert Van Dekker. Not only with power, be it said, but complexity and a grasp of the character of the statesman-patriot.

Though all of the cast perform excellently, the highest praise must go to Alexander F. Frank in his one scene as Gladstone, and to Herbert Duffy as a hard-fisted but not hard-hearted Irish member of Parliament.

Prescription FOR SPRING: REEFERS or REDINGOTES

FEBRUARY 15, 1937, VOGUE SAID: "Let a Reefer be your first entering wedge into spring . . . and the Redingote line again—and what could be kinder?"

You may mind your P's and Q's, but this spring, your R's demand attention—the Reefer and the Redingote. Way back in November, 1936, Schiaparelli and Molyneux pointed the way. American women saw the practical side immediately—one Redingote multiplies a whole wardrobe. The Reefer coat, with its slimming lines, is a short cut to youth. Both the Redingote and the Reefer appreciate the drama in simplicity. Harper's Bazaar, Vogue and all the bibles of fashion turned press agent for these two big R's. Jeanne Lombard, Fashion Director of our New York offices, repeats herself again and again, wiring us: "Reefers and Redingotes lead in New York. Watch your stocks." Lansburgh's has watched stocks—that's why Washington is certain to find a great variety of the R's prescribed for spring tonics!

Newsom Breezes Into Camp; Has No Idea of Yielding to Griffith

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 8.

Mr. Jonathan Stone, of the Mulberry, Tenn., Stones, is finding the Washington training camp a most pleasant place this season and of a morning here it may be either the cheery note of the mockingbird or the contented whistling of Johnny Stone that greets our ears.

POVICH.

Twelve months have wrought a tremendous change in the position of Johnny Stone with the Nats. Last season he was the stepchild of the squad—with two strikes called against him before he he had even swung a bat.

He came to camp nursing two wounds—in his pride and in his pocketbook. Boss Clark Griffith had cut his salary, and Manager Bucky Harris was laying his plans for the 1936 season with the name of Johnny Stone figuring only inconspicuously.

* * * *

Stone was inclined to sulk and pout and altogether find fault with his lot, and you didn't blame him much. He had a right to squawk and demand to know what a guy had to do to make good in this league—because Stone finished the season before with a .317 batting average, was fifth among the league's right fielders in hitting, and appended to his right shoulder was the best throwing arm on the Washington club.

* * * *

* * * *

This despite the fact that Stone, off and on the records, rated as a better outfielder than any of the quartet who were deemed good enough to be regulars. Both Reynolds and Hill had failed to hit .300 the season before, Powell had a .305 batting average but was possessed of a scatter-arm, and Sington had been tried once and had been found wanting.

* * * *

There were veiled hints by Griffith and Harris that Stone lacked spirit, that he was a good journeyman ball player, but that he didn't play winning ball. It was a kick in the pants, as we say in our set, to a swell ball player who could do everything well and did, but didn't brag about it.

* * * *

Anyway, the Nats' bosses saw all of their thories riddled by the facts. Reynolds couldn't make the grade and had to be benched. Hill went hitless in his first two games and followed Reynolds to the bench. Sington was released before the season started—and Johnny Stone slugged his way into the clean-up role in the batting order.

* * * *

If last memories linger, then Harris is constrained to regard Stope as a guy indispensable to the welfare of the Nats. Because it was on the last day of the 1936 season that Stone, needing four hits to boost his batting average up to the .340 mark, whacked out five hits in five trips to the plate and shot the figure to .341.

The tall, blond and handsome fellow who came to Orlando last year in the rear of the eight ball, metaphorically speaking, is now an immovable fixture with the club.

* * * *

At one stage of the season last year, Harris was stricken with the belief that Stone could not hit left-handed pitching consistently, lifted him from the lineup frequently when a southpaw faced the Nats. In submissive silence, Stone nursed his wounded pride.

* * * *

"The joke of it was," Stone told this department today, "is that there are right-handers in the league who bother me more than southpaws. I don't know where Bucky got the idea I couldn't hit left-handers, but he had it, no doubt of that.

"But Bucky has been nice about it. The first thing he told me when I met him here the other day was that I would be in there against all kind of pitching.

* * * *

"Personally, I think all those right-handed and left-handed theories are screwey. Look at Jess Hill. They used to lift him out of there quite often when a right-hander was pitching last season and then put him in against left-handers. Jess kept a record of his hitting in that little black book he carries and at the end o the season he discovered that he had a better record against right-handers than against southpaws—and he's a right-handed hitter."

G. W. Cubs Extended To Top D. & H., 44-38

Champions Barely Escape Elimination; United Typists and Stewart Girls Win; Rinaldis Play Church Five Tonight.

The George Washington freshmen, defending champions in The Post's A. A. U. basketball championships were extended to the limit last night to turn back the powerful Delaware and Hudson five at the Heurich gymnasium, 44 to 38.

Barely escaping elimination, the collegians finally pulled through after the Coal company had cut down a 21-16 half-time lead to 2 points. Karp, All-New Jersey scholastic guard, led the Freshmen with 16 points to give the Colonials their scoring punch.

Don Garber, former Western High boy, and George Beach, former Tech High center, led the scoring for D. & H., with 11 and 9 points apiece. Joe Headstream, the Freshmen's center from Texas, turned in a neat pivot game with 7 points. It was the closest escape a leading team in the tournament has yet encountered.

In the other two games, the United Typewriter girls team spanked the Labor Recreation team, 53-14, with pretty Emily Harrington piling in 17 points, and Dot Reid 18 to do most of the scoring.

The comely Stewart Bros. Photographers also won a first round tussle in the girls division, defeating the Jewish Community Center, 29-6, after leading 19-4, at the half. Miss Hedinger, with 15 points, led the scoring.

The championships get more or less of a "breather" in their schedule tonight at the Heurich Gymnasium. In the only unlimited tilt of the evening the Rinaldi Tailors face the National City Christian Church five at 9:30 o'clock.

Other games at Heurich's include two 145-pound class battles. At 7:30 p. m. Interstate Commerce Commission meets the Sport Center five and an hour later Naylor's Seafood faces Department of Agriculture.

At the Boys Club, the Central Y. M. C. A. five and the Georgetown Boys Club collide in a 115-pound class game at 8 o'clock. An hour later the Langley Boys Club, 100-pound champions last year, meet the strong Police Boys Club No. 4 team.

The Rinaldis are heavily favored to crash into the third round of play.

Henry Picard, Revolta Lead In 4-Ball Golf

Pair Shoots 63 to Set Pace for International Field at Miami.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., March 8.—Henry Picard and Johnny Revolta birdied their way today toward another victory in the international four-ball golf matches with a 9 under par 63 before a tropical rainstorm caught them and the rest of the field at lunch time.

The second rounds of the 36-hole quarter-final matches scheduled today were postponed until tomorrow afternoon, with the semifinals put off until Wednesday and the finals to Thursday.

Two other matches were square—those of Dick Metz and Ky Laffoon against Jimmy Thomason and Harry Cooper, in which the medal scores were 68, and Johnny Farrell and Willie Klein against Lawson Little and Tony Manero, who had 70s.

The downpour drove the fourth match off the eighteenth green, with Willie MacFarlane and Frank Walsh holding a 1-hole lead over Ed Oliver and Sam Snead, the sensational youngsters.

As they stuck in the markers and picked up their balls until tomorrow, Walsh had the best chance to take the par 5 hole—a 20-foot putt for a birdie 4. His partner was off to the side behind a trap. Snead was past the green and Oliver was short.

Unknown Winston Defeats Red Barry

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Holyoke, Mass., March 8.—Unknown Winston, local Negro, weighing 193 pounds, hammered Donald (Red) Barry, Washington, D. C., 198 pounds, all around the ring for ten rounds here tonight in the Volley Arena to win a decision in the main bout. The vote was unanimous. Barry, puffing and wheezing from the second round on, was knocked down for no count in the fourth with a right to the body and stumbled down two other times for no count.

Eddie Mader Held to Draw By Williams

D. C. Fighter Apparently Best, Loses Verdict on Split Decision.

By Bill McCormick.

Charles (Hobo) Williams, a local middleweight who is so good as a light-heavyweight he has to fight heavyweights, held the highly favored Eddie Mader to a draw in a rousing eight-round feature at Turner's Arena last night.

On the short end of 2-to-1 odds, Mader was forced to battle as he never battled before to keep from being dropped to the canvas for the fatal ten count. Williams fought perhaps his best fight, a fight that won him the decision in the opinion of most of the 1,522 customers who paid $1,813 for the privilege of booing the official award.

Referee Denny Hughes and Judge Bob Eller voted the draw. The other judge, Dr. O. U. Singer, declared Williams the winner. On The Post scoresheet, the Hobo was ahead 39 points to 36½ at the finish.

Williams did practically all of his effective scoring when he forced the fight. At times he was constrained to rare back and allow the New York heavyweight take the lead. At those times, the local lad fared not at all well, as Mader peppered him with left hooks, right crosses and punches of all descriptions fired from all angles.

From the opening bell the tussle was a merry dog-eat-dog affair. The rules seemed to be off on both sides and each contestant repeatedly heeled, elbowed, rammed shoulders under chins and even took pot shots below the belt.

As early as the fourth round Williams jumped into a lead by loosing a furious barrage which drove Mader about the ring and had the New York gamester wobbly. The Hobo punched away all his energy, but was unable to drop Eddie.

Williams loafed too much through the fifth, but almost evened the round as a hard right to the head again almost floored Mader. Tired, Williams waited and countered effectively throughout the sixth. His pot shots brought blood from Eddie's nose.

Once again in the seventh round, Williams loafed and Mader piled up a big lead, only to have it almost wiped out as a crashing right to he head nearly dropped Eddie at the bell.

Clarence Sloat, the Baltimore knocker-out, felled Charley Stefano for the full count in the second round of a scheduled six-round preliminary. Sloat mowed down the New York lightweight with a crushing right after 4 minutes and 25 seconds of actual warfare.

In a curtain-raiser, Joe (Palooka) Mathews, of Richmond, won a four-round decision from Mike O'Leary, of Baltimore.

Ossie Stewart, colored Pittsburgh welterweight, made it two in a row over Sammy Williams by knocking out the Washington southpaw in the fifth round.

Williams fought southpaw part of the time and right-handed the rest, but right or left handed, he was unable to match Ossie's boxing skill. Stewart finally floored Sammy with a crashing right. The Washington welter rose wobbly and Referee Denny Hughes halted the action after 1 minute and 30 seconds of the fifth.

Rival Cities Scream at Dixie Loop's Ban on All 'Outside' Grid Bowl Tilts

Legislature in Georgia Takes Up Matter of 'Slight' to Atlanta.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, March 8.—The official ban placed on "bowl" football games, except those sponsored in Pasadena and New Orleans, stirred widespread controversy today, including charges the Southeastern Conference had discriminated against other cities.

Reaction to the conference's move in forbidding its team to play post season games controlled partly or wholly by "third parties," aside from the Sugar and Rose Bowl contests, was mixed but for the most part had little approval.

Charges of discrimination were made in Florida, where the city of Miami sponsors the Orange Bowl and Georgia, where Atlanta officials made known a movement was under way to present a game next New Year's Day.

"Such a rule is rankly discriminatory against the city of Atlanta and other cities in the Southeastern Conference territory and is unfair and unjust to such cities," said a resolution introduced in the Georgia House of Representatives by the Fulton County (Atlanta) delegation.

The resolution asked that the faculties of the Georgia School of Technology and the University of Georgia "be called on to use their influence" in getting the rule rescinded.

W. Keith Phillips, chairman of the Orange Bowl committee, planned to write conference officials asking that the matter be reopened. Dinty Dennis, sports editor of the Miami Herald, foresaw repercussions in the nature of a "sit-down" strike by Florida athletes in other Southeastern schools against the conference "politicians."

On the other hand, Josh Cody, Florida's head coach, said he was sorry the action was taken.

Both Claim The Victory After Parley

Griffith 'Balmy' in Talk of Reduction, Claims Mound Martyr.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 8.—Buck Newsom and Clark Griffith emerged from a two-hour salary session late tonight with Newsom still unsigned to a Washington contract and the Nats' owner expressing great indifference.

"Newsom promised me an answer in the morning; it's his move," said Griffith, whereupon the correspondents here rushed off to interview the big pitcher.

"Griffith said he would give me an answer in the morning; it's his move," said Newsom.

Despite their seeming anxiety to thrust the next move upon the other, Griffith and Newsom are near terms, it was indicated by the changed attitude of the big pitcher who came to Orlando today breathing fire and brimstone and tonight was around the lobby proclaiming Griffith "Not a bad fellow."

According to Griffith, his original offer to Newsom still stands—a $9,000 salary that represents a $2,000 reduction in his 1936 wages.

"No, I didn't change my offer, and Newsom will accept it or else," declared Griffith. "Fact is, I don't give a hang whether he signs or not. He lost too many ball games for us last season. I won't let him work out with the team until he's signed."

Newsom was comparatively inarticulate after the salary session. The bluster of the early afternoon had gone, and he said, simply, "I gave Griffith something to think about up there tonight. After he sleeps on it, he'll want me to pitch for him—at my terms."

Blustering Buck registered at the Nats' hotel and after changing his collar, sent a bell-hop to Griffith's room with a message that he had arrived and was available for salary conference. The bell-hop reported that the Nats' owner was on the golf course and thus no palavering was possible until after dinner.

The big pitcher said sure, he was

Lewis, Lightheavy Champ, Is Signed for a Fight Here in June

N. B. A. to Lift Its Ban; Unbeaten Dave Clark Or Ahearn to Be Foe

Titlist Is to Get 35% of Gate Receipts for Bout at Griffith Stadium; Fight Squares Accounts for 'Run-Out' on Match Here.

By Bill McCormick.

The suspension of Light-heavyweight Champion John Henry Lewis, imposed by the National Boxing Association, was virtually lifted and Washington gained a great fight after a stormy session in the offices of the District Boxing Commission yesterday.

After some three hours of heated bickering, Lewis signed a contract to box either Shorty Ahearn, of Newark, N. J., or Dave Clark, of Detroit, here on a date in June.

The ruler of the 175-pound division also agreed that out of the first moneys due him as his share of the gate receipts, $585 would be returned to Promoter Earl McDonald, who had Lewis signed for the bout last summer that started all the argument.

After the agreement was reached, Edward B. Foster, executive secretary of the N. B. A., announced Lewis' suspension would be lifted as soon as he had seen a copy of a cable from England which would show good faith on the part of Lewis in not going through with a bout against Tiger Roy Williams, with whom McDonald had him booked.

Barred Last Fall.

Present at the meeting, besides Foster, were Chairman Ernest W. Brown, Kenneth Parkinson and Claude Owen, of the District Boxing Commission; Lewis and his manager, Gus Greenlee; McDonald and his matchmaker, Walter Young. Attorney Louis Rothschild represented Promoter McDonald and Ira Hurwick was counsel for the champion.

Lewis first was suspended last fall, at the request of the District commission, for not going through with the Williams bout. McDonald was unable to reach any agreement with the title-holder and when Lewis fought outside the jurisdiction of the N. B. A., he was automatically suspended for one year by that organization.

The cablegram, which must be shown before the suspension is lifted, is one from England telling Greenlee that money for a fight against Len Harvey had been deposited in a New York bank. Promoter McDonald admits having seen this document, but claims he did not understand it canceled the Washington bout with Williams.

Most of the fussing at yesterday's meeting centered around the payment of the $585 Promoter McDonald claimed he had spent in preparing for the Williams contest. As soon as Greenlee agreed to have this amount deducted from Lewis' purse, complete accord was quickly reached.

Lewis' contract calls for him to receive 35 per cent of the gate receipts, less the $585 deduction, and four round trip tickets from Pittsburgh. It also calls for his opponent to weigh not less than 177 pounds.

Greenless is of the opinion that Dave Clark, one of the acceptable opponents, will not be able to weigh that much for a fight. Clark, a stable mate of Joe Louis, is one of the best boxers in the division and as yet undefeated.

Shorty Ahearn, the other opponent named in the articles, is a legitimate heavyweight. He gained attention here is his first fight by knocking out Killer Lamar, who was being touted as a coming Joe Louis. He repeated his knockout of Lamar, then climaxed his performance by whipping Billy Edwards, Lamar's manager, who came out of retirement for the bout.

The Washington Ball Club will be using Griffith Stadium, the site of the fight, the latter part of June. The team will be on the road from June 1 to June 14, inclusive.

After the meeting, Maj. Brown, chairman of the District Commission, said neither the police benefit show or any other card would be sanctioned for a date that would conflict in any way with the John Henry Lewis bout.

Radio Rights Net $50,000 To Minor Loop

American Association to Pay All Administrative Costs From the Sale.

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, March 8.—The American Association sold its 1937 league-wide broadcasting privileges today for enough to pay its umpires, the prseident's salary and all administrative costs for the season.

President George M. Trautman, who signed the agreement after an okeh from the eight club owners, said it was the first time an entire league had contracted for the "airing" of its games.

Trautman declined to say how much the league received for the radio privileges, but announced that the usual administrative assessment of 4 cents per admission against each club had been canceled for the coming campaign. The radio revenue, he said, would more than offset the league receipts derived from the admission assessment.

The clubs, which in the past had sold their own broadcast rights, will retain the 4 cents usually paid the league on each admission, and Trautman said each club would benefit by the change.

Last year the league played to 1,235,000 paid admissions, giving the league approximately $50,000 in administrative funds from the admission assessment. Trautman said the loop anticipated an attendance increase this year, indicating the broadcast rights brought more than the $50,000 paid in by the eight clubs during 1936.

Joint sponsors of the broadcasts in all association cities will be General Mills of Minneapolis Socony Vacuum Oil Co.

Under the contract all week-day contests would be broadcast, but the Sunday and holiday games would be kept off the air.

Randall 100-Pounders Down Dunbar for Title

Gaining a 14-7 lead on its opponent in the first half, the Randall 100-pound quintet last night defeated Dunbar's representatives, 39-27, for the 100-pound colored Community Center championship. Wilkerson starred for the victors, ringing up 18 field goals and a foul for 19 points. Plummer was outstanding for the losers.

Most Laurels Go to New York In Finals of Golden Gloves

By the United Press.

New York, March 8.—New York boxers took the lion's share of the laurels in the finals of the Golden Gloves boxing finals here tonight. The bouts represent the culmination of a series of over 3,000 amateur elimination fights among the best amateurs of the Atlantic seaboard area.

John Sinnott, an 18-year-old Wall Street office boy, became the first champion, barely winning the 112-pound sub-novice title over Charles Allen, 18-year-old Philadelphia high school scrapper, in the first of 16 final bouts.

Tonight's 16 winners—survivors of a field of 7,453 East Coast youngsters from Maine to Miami who started the quest for titles last month—go to Chicago March 24 for an intersectional tournament with a team of Mid-winter winners.

William Speary, Nanticoke, Pa., high school student, won the 112-pound open title with an unpopular decision victory over Allie Stolz, of Paterson, N. J. Speary was down for no count in the second round. New York captured its third straight title in the sub-novic division when Antonio Bianco outpointed Francis Bruno, of Trenton, N. J., in the 126-pound class. Jackie Donovan, blond Buffalo high school youngster, won the open title in the same class with a decision victory over Sammy Ventimiglia, New York machinist.

Johnny Tonkowich, New York, won the 135-pound sub-novice title with a technical knockout victory in 1:30 of the third round over Vincent Messina, New York. Joe Kelly, a high school student, brought Philadelphia its second title in the open division when he outpointed George Henry, Texas-born Negro WPA worker, in a fast 135-pound bout.

Ray O'Connell, 20-year-old restaurant counter man, made it five straight for New York in the sub-novice division with a hard-fought decision victory over Johnny Colfer, Miami, Fla., stock checker, in the 147-pound class.

Jackie Tolson broughgt New York its first open victory with a decision triumph over Freddie Lewis, Philadelphia grocery clerk, in the 147-pound class.

Bob Miller, Hawthorne, N. J., high school youngster, won the 160-pound sub-novice crown by outpointing Ed. McAllister, a sailor off the U. S. S. Quincy from Boston.

Harry Smith, a full-blooded Mohawk from Buffalo, N. Y., whose tribal name is "Silver Heels," won the 160-pound Open championship with a close decision triumph over Walter Padlo, Philadelphia leather worker.

Gus Alexander, Trenton, N. J., Negro C. C. C. worker, woon the sub-novice light-heavyweight title with a three-round technical kayo victory over another Negro, Herman Gowdy, Philadelphia mechanic's helper.

The open light-heavyweight crown was taken by Charles Jackson, New York Negro, who outpointed Gaetano Rozzi, of Nassau, N. Y.

Bobby Wilson Stopped In 8th Round by Walker

New York, March 8.—Paulie Walker, hard-hitting Trenton welterweight, earned a technical knockout victory over Irish Bobby Wilson in 2 minutes and 32 seconds of the eighth and last round of their fight here tonight.

Another 18 seconds and Wilson would have remained the entire distance, but he was a badly beaten fighter when the referee stopped the fight. Walker weighed 151 and Wilson 147½.

Federal League Convenes.

A meeting of the Federal League of the Post Sandlot Association will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at the Atlas Sports store. All Federal teams wishing to enter must have representatives present.

Newsom Sure Griffith Won't Cut His Pay

Hurler Breezes Into Nat Camp; Has No Intention of Taking Slash.

ignoring Griffith's warning not to report to Orlando unless he was ready to sign his contract, which called for a $2,000 reduction in his $11,000 salary of last season.

"That's a laugh," said Buck, and then, just to drive his point home, he laughed "Griffith can't keep me out of the State of Florida, can he? This is still a free country, even if there are people like Griffith in it."

No Tickee, No Shirtee.

To hear Newsom tell it, and all within an area of a half dozen blocks can hear Newsom without straining an eardrum, what he said at his Hartsville, S. C., home last week still goes. He won't sign unless he gets a raise in salary.

"Why, he's balmy if he thinks I'm gonna sign for less than I got last year," declared Newsom. "This whole salary thing is his problem, not mine. I don't have any investment in Griffith, but he's got a $40,000 investment in me—the price he paid the Browns three years ago. He can't afford to let that go by the boards, just for the sake of a pay raise.

"Suppose I did sign for that $9,000, it would be a joke. I wouldn't like it and Griff would have a dissatisfied ball player. A dismissed pitcher ain't worth $50 a month. So Griff had better wise up.

"He said something in one of his wires about a voluntary bonus if my work this season warranted it," added Buck, "and that's a laugh, too. I wouldn't go for any more of those bonus arrangements if St. Peter was a witness.

"How about last year? I was supposed to get a $1,500 bonus if I won 20 games, and what happened? For a stretch of 22 games they let me pitch only two innings. No more of that bonus stuff. I want the money on the line."

Newsom was beginning to warm up to his topic and pictured himself as the outraged ball player as he recalled his feats of valiance and derring-do since he joined the Nats.

"I've pitched for this club with broken legs and broken jaws and won more than my share of games for 'em, but what has it gotten me—a salary slash. Nuts, why don't they trade me? I'll tell you why—because I mean too much to this ball club—too much out there on the pitching mound and too much at the gate—where the fans appreciate me."

Newsom reported here at 208 pounds—8 over his playing weight—and immediately gave his pitching arm a strenuous workout on the hand-levers of the slot machines.

He came shockingly close to the jack-pot on one investment and then bethought himself of something else he had to say.

"Say, how about that wire I got from Griffith telling me unless I reported yesterday and signed, he'd put me on the nonreporting suspended list? That's good, suspending a player who doesn't want to play for him."

Storm Mars Tropical Opening

Rudie Wins; Schmidl Up On 3 Victors

Favorite Pays $5.40 in Feature Handicap of Day's Program.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 8.—The Gables Racing Association's 24-day meeting, which will close the long and successful Florida season, opened here today under the most adverse weather conditions of the winter. Rain began falling more than an hour before first race post time and a steady, terrific downpour soon had the racing strip completely submerged by water. The first event was run in a blinding storm and the colors could not be distinguished except in the stretch and at the finish.

The rain subsided, except for a few light showers, after the initial contest and the crowd, considering the elements, was able to clearly see the featured Pan-American Handicap. W. H. Gallagher, of New York, sent out the favorite in Rudie, 3-year-old son of Reigh Count. The colt made all his own pace and won in a drive by a length and a half. Mrs. Emil Denemark's pair, Sir Quest and Higher Cloud, splashed to the place and show, respectively, a half length apart.

Rudie ran the 6 furlongs in the excellent time of 1:12 4-5 and paid $5.40. Fancied horses fared well and helped to keep the crowd in a pleasant mood, cloudburst or no.

Sir Quest, recently purchased from Mrs. W. Plunket Stewart, outfinished his stablemate for the place position.

The storm was so bad that the public address system could not be used because of wet wires.

Racing through a driving rain and over a water-covered track, Harp o' Gold, a $6.70-for-$2 shot, won the first event. Hubert Le Blanc, leading Hialeah apprentice rider, had the mount.

A dead heat developed for the place between Opoca and Slippery Jim. Opoca paid $3.50 place and $4.10 show, while Slippery Jim's place price was $4.00 and her show $5.10. The time was 1:16 1-5.

Another well-liked sprinter clicked in the second race, also of 6 furlongs. Inscona, paying $7.40, jumped into instant command under the promising apprentice Albert Schmidl. The boy let him open up a commanding lead and Inscona won in hollow style by four lengths, finishing in 1:14 3-5. B. Eighty provided what contention there was throughout the running and took second money by a length from the forward running Marson. The terrific rain halted after this event and it was impossible to see across the track.

Time Out! . . . . By Chet Smith

At the Post . . .

Dear Al:

The horses of Mr. and Mrs. William Ziegler, of New York, may bear watching when the Maryland season opens at Bowie on April 1. Trainer Matt Brady has shipped the string back to the Ziegler farm at Middleburg, Va., where the horses will be rested for spring and summer racing. Nick Wall, who does the contract riding for this establishment, remains at Tropical Park. Mrs. Emil Denemark, whose horses have been dominating Florida racing, will ship 35 horses to Havre de Grace for the spring meeting. General Manager Joe Boyle, of Bowie, is determined that there will be no tampering with horses at Bowie this spring. He has increased his police facilities and anyone caught around the stables at night who fails to have the proper credentials is going to be in for some mighty rough treatment. Boyle was pleased to learn of the passing of the bill which makes tampering with horses a felony in Maryland and punishable with a three-year jail term. However, he realizes that there will be those willing to take a chance despite the consequences and is planning accordingly.

BILL.

First race—Second Guess, second last out at Hialeah, figures to defeat this field of ordinary sprinters. Give away some weight but needs only the right ride. Blue Donna is in rare form and will not be far out of it. If the track is muddy, Balcony would have an excellent chance.

Second race—Wild Pigeon seems to have found the right spot in this company. Young Barba will do the riding. Character has good speed now and figures closest to the top one. Narise and Bright Haven are possibilities on an off track.

Third race—The Paragon Stable entry of Upsee Dutch and Bold Turk appears ready to take the chief end of the purse in this juvenile event. Chanceful is well bred and has good trials. The parrish entry of Backintime and Pamelob should take a piece of the money.

Fourth race—Dark Sun and Glassy Eye probably will battle it out in this maiden event. Both have fair races to recommend them. Sweep Boy will be dangerous on an off track.

Fifth race—Genie Palatine, the consistent mare from the Denemark string, seems headed for another set of brackets here. She gets in light and draws Leblanc, the crack apprentice. Top Dog looms as the one to beat. Our Reigh for the show.

Sixth race—The Queen has those smashing recent races to recommend her and appears to be the best bet of the day. Oddesa Boy shot and missed last out but is dangerous. Scotch Boy is the mudder of the field.

Seventh race—Sandwrack may benefit from the change of courses. This veteran, a habitual winner at long odds, will be ridden by Jackie Westrope. Blind Brook and the Lindner entry of Lone Hand and Pay Rack to fight it out for the minor awards.

Eighth race—The featherweighted Touche, with Leblanc in the saddle, will like this mile route. Blakeen comes off that fine Hialeah effort. Galloping to show.

Best bet—The Queen.

Cothran Girl Is Belleview Golf Medalist

Patty Berg Is 2 Strokes Back With 82; Miss Dettweiler Has 88.

By the Associated Press.

Belleair, Fla., March 8.—Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., outplayed better known women golfers in the annual Belleview Biltmore golf tournament today, to win medal honors with a fine 80.

Two strokes behind were Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, former national women's champion, and Patty Berg, Minneapolis schoolgirl star.

Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., the outstanding player in the Florida tournaments this winter, trailed with an 85.

Tied for fourth with Miss Hemphill was Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco. Other top flight qualifiers and their 18-hole scores:

Goldie Bateson, Milwaukee, 87; Mary K. Brown, Cleveland, 88; Helen Dettweiler, Washington, 88; Jean Bauer, Providence, R. I., 90; Virginia Guilfoil, Syracuse, 90; Bernice Wall, Oshkosh, Wis., 90; Mrs. Lillian K. Zech, Chicago, 91; Mrs. Mark McGarry, St. Petersburg, 93; Mrs. K. W. Foster, Provdence, 94; Mrs. Scott Probasco, Chattanooga, Tenn., 95, and Mrs. A. B. MacWithey, Deland, Fla., 96.

Miss Hemphill, winner last year after a surprise victory over Mrs. Vare, meets Miss Guilfoil tomorrow. Miss Berg drew a worthy foe in Miss Bauer. Another match that promises to be close matches Miss Cothran and Mrs. Zech. Mrs. Vare figures to eliminate Miss Wall.

Final Ft. Myer Horse Show Is Listed Tonight

Tonight will be Washington's last opportunity to witness one of Fort Myer's spectacular Indoor Horse Shows. The fourth and final of the series of indoor shows will be held in the new riding hall at the post at 7:30 p. m.

In addition to nine thrilling classes arranged by Maj. Arthur P. Thayer, director of the show, in which will be seen in action the best of the local hunters and jumpers, there will be awarded to the champion of these classes the trophy emblematic of the highest total of point-winner of the four shows.

A class sure to occasion much interest is that limited to student hunt teams from the local girls' schools. Entries of four teams have been received with the prospect of several more.

Many well-known local horses have been entered and much spirited competition is in prospect. Mrs. Eleanor Patterson has entered her now famous "Cypress De Beaux," a consistent performer, Miss Margaret Cotter's "Rocksie" and Miss Margaret Hill's "Questionnaire."

Other well-known exhibitors with their horses will be:

G-Men Near Federal Loop Pin Crown

District pin-wheels began another week of activity last night in their dash down the home stretch with many of the loops waging close battles for the championship of their respective circuits. As has been the case in previous seasons, many pennants hinged on the results of the last week of the schedules.

Among the highly prized titles, the race in the strong Federal loop appears to be a foregone conclusion with the Bureau of Investigation five showing its heels to all rivals. Supporting a seven-game lead, the G-Men moved closer to its goal last night by stopping its closest contender, Senate, two games. "Dutch" Newman's 146 game and Astor Clarke's 368 set paved the way to victory. Andy Pryor's 151 effort figured in Senate's only win.

Milton Walker topped the individual scoring feats, shooting a 399 set in G. P. O.'s odd game decision over Labor. War and I. B. E. W. No. 121, each gained the nod over Veterans Administration and Navy, respectively.

Two season records went into discard in the American Federation of Government Employes League when Andy Gleeson shot games of 120, 150 and 133 for a new mark of 403 and aided W. P. A. in chalking up a high total pinfall score of 1,675. Public Health pulled up on even terms with Tariff Commission for first place honors.

Judge & Detweiler bumped the leading Progressive Printing Co. three games in the Graphic Arts League. . . . The Cold Streamers hopped from third to first place on total pinfall in the A. & P. League, whitewashing Our Own. Sultana, tied for the lead last week with Red Circle, dropped three to the last place Rajah. . . . C. S. Nicoll (Empires), chalked up a new set mark in the Procurement League, totaling 396 for his three games. The Normans continued to set the pace by swamping Gothics.

Witness Links Fidelity Officer In Fund Switch

Charged with forgery of a withdrawal slip of $1,500 Fred R. Rhodes, former president of the Fidelity Building & Loan Association, yesterday went on trial in District Court before Justice Peyton Gordon. Rhodes is being tried on only one charge now although he is charged with 20 larceny and 4 forgery violations, in all of which he has been indicted.

The charge presented yesterday involved Rhodes with the forgery of a withdrawl slip for $1,500 in the name of Desire A. Irr, an engraver in the Government Printing Office, who was a substantial depositor in the association.

Mrs. Ruth S. Horner, who is employed in Rhodes' law office, and who was an officer of the Building & Loan Association, testified that she had called Rhodes attention to an overdraft of slightly more than $1,700 in his account and that the matter was taken care of through the $1,500 slip and other minor items. She allegedly identified the slip as being the handwriting of Rhodes.

Mrs. Horner, who still was on the stand as the first witness when court was adjourned, also said that the Rhodes account was used as a dumping ground for many minor items in the association's accounts.

Rhodes connection with the organization was terminated shortly after Federal officers had begun a scrutiny of its affairs. He steadfastly has denied his guilt, and his attorneys, William E. Leahy and William J. Hughes, jr., have insisted he was not guilty of the charges. Assistant United States Attorney J. J. Wilson said he would present other charges against the banker-lawyer regardless of the outcome of the present case.

On the Air Today

Women are better natural broadcasters than men, says Phil Lord, now vacationing from his "We the People" series. But there's a string to it. He says that members of the stronger sex have more interesting stories to tell the world.

"I receive almost ten requests from men for every one from women for a place on "We the People." This is natural, as men get out into the world, have more adventures than women and are in a position to do things that are more exciting to tell others.

"It may be that women are more reticent about broadcasting their personal experiences or activities. But the women who have been our guests have adapted themselves to the microphone with remarkable readiness and told their stories in a clear, direct manner. Among our best speakers were Mollie Tickle-pitcher, of Turniptop, Tenn.; Aunt Ireene, of the Ozarks, and Mrs. Mary Harlow, from the Norfolk restaurant where the customer is never right. They all demonstrated an instinctive sense of the dramatic."

Lord also makes the point that such men and women, picked from the ordinary walks of life, very often have dramatic potentialities. Some of them have actually shown a great natural talent.

Comes talk now of a new national network. Those interested financially are said to be Richard C. Paterson, former executive vice president of N. B. C., and Dr. Stanley High, head of the Good Neighbor League. All of which recalls the failures of the past—the network plans of Al Smith and Vincent Astor; Ed Wynn's venture, which is believed to have cost him a fair share of his personal fortune; Samuel Insull's efforts in the Chicago area, and others. Mutual alone has weathered the exigencies of competition. J. H. H.

Copper, Lead Tin and Zinc At New Highs

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 8.—A general increase of 1¼ cents a pound in the domestic price of copper was announced today by leading producers, bringing the quotation to the highest level since April, 1930, at 16¼ cents. Copper for export was quoted at 16.75 cents a pound delivered at principal European ports. The price at the end of last week was 16.40 cents.

Principal fabricators of copper in this country adjusted the prices of their product upward to correspond with the increase in the value of the raw metal.

The new domestic price supplants the 15-cent level which had been in effect since late February. Trade circles saw in today's increase a continued reflection of the scramble for metal abroad, where speculators have been buying briskly expecting to realize large profits as the British armaments program and other war-like preparations abroad absorb copper and other metals.

New York, March 8 (AP).—Lead and zinc prices were boosted today as metals held the spotlight in commodity trading. Leading producers hoisted zinc one-half cent to 7½ cents a pound, East St. Louis. It was the highest for the metal since February, 1926. Lead was marked up one-quarter of a cent to 7.25 cents a pound, New York, and 7.10 East St. Louis, a new peak since 1929. At the same time metal brokers were quoting No. 1 heavy metal steel scrap at $22.50 a ton, Pittsburgh, the highest price in 14 years.

Borden Net Gains 63% Over Last Year

New York, March 8.—Net earnings of $7,921,489, a gain of $3,079,141, or more than 63 per cent, over those of the previous year, are shown by the report of the Borden Company for last year. Fluid milk profits represented 11 per cent of the 1936 net earnings, according to Arthur W. Milburn, president, who said that fluid milk sales totaling 781,000,000 quarts yielded profits of $876,000, or one-ninth of a cent a quart.

Eighty-nine per cent of the 1936 net income was derived from milk products other than fluid milk and from non-milk products, some of which are proprietary specialties, some of which are luxury or semi-luxury products, but none of which, according to Mr. Milburn, occupies the same place in the consuming public's mind as does fluid milk.

"Out of every dollar we received in 1936 from the sale of fluid milk," he added, "we paid 46 cents to the farmer and 30 cents to employes. The balance of 24 cents covered the cost of transportation, pasteurization, refrigeration, gasoline, containers, fuel, feed, taxes, insurance, depreciation, repairs and other similar items. What was left for the company after paying the above expenses was a trifle less than 1 cent for each dollar of sales."

Steel Operations At Peak Since 1929

New York, March 8 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute announced today that steel operations this week had moved up to a new peak for the recovery at 87.3 per cent of capacity compared with 85.8 last week. It was the highest the industry has attained since October, 1929, the Institute said.

A month ago operations were at 80.6 per cent of capacity and a year ago at 55.8.

Selling Squall Brings Down Prices in Final Hour With Chrysler the Storm Center.

New York, March 8.—Stocks were nervous and in alternate periods of strength and weakness they definitely lost ground in the closing dealings, with sales volume rising to above 3,000,000 shares. What touched off the last attack on prices apparently was the news of a breakdown of labor negotiations in the Chrysler plants and a fresh outbreak in General Motors. That excuse at least was good for a slice of 4 points or so from Chrysler shares and other groups weakened. Metals and a few of the public utilities offered the most resistance. Government bonds declined, although the terms of the new Treasury financing were as expected. May wheat closed half a cent higher at 136 cents a bushel.

Industrial news of the new week was blotched with sporadic strike outbreaks, including General Motors and some of the steel mills. It is pretty well concluded that unionization of industry will go on apace, but that perhaps corporations can, for a while, keep up with the game by increasing their selling prices and securing a larger sales volume—all of which helps to insure inflation soon or late. That is especially true at a time when the Government is giving every indication of spending more than it takes in, and the list of people in Wall Street who are becoming convinced that, although for worse in the long run, the country is sailing toward inflation, is rapidly growing.

This week the steel industry will mount to an operating rate of 87.3 per cent of capacity, according to the Iron Age, a gain of 4 per cent. The mills are now running at a greater rate than has been seen since the autumn of 1929 and one nearly twice as high as a year ago. After an early period of profit taking the bullish estimate of operating rate coincided with a fresh rise in the steel shares. Rallies of a point were easily made by the favorites, including Steel, Rolling Mills, Bethlehem, Republic and National, but no exciting market developed.

Rails were inspired at times. Particularly by the big opening in New York Central (30,000 shares at a point advance), but they too were held back by profit taking. British investment, it was reported, was stopped by fears of French withdrawals, but brokers here insisted they saw no signs of important withdrawals for French account. They found new buying instead.

Shortly after the opening of the final hour of trading the market changed its mind again and a fresh burst of selling broke out. It rapidly reduced prices for Chrysler, Steel and other motor and steel shares, although a handful resisted stubbornly, and spread to the stronger rails. New York Central finally succumbed and sold lower than its previous closing price. Steel, General Electric, General Motors, Western Union and other leaders were scraped for a point or two in a rising volume of trading.

French Gold.

Paris cables stating that the Bank of France today had fixed a price of 24,509,527 francs for one kilogram of fine gold were construed as meaning that the bank had bought gold offered to it at that price, subject to approval of Parliament and that the bank would daily fix a buying and selling price after authorization. The tentative price, at any rate, worked out at about $34.78 an ounce here with Francs at 4.56½ cents. The bank's action apparently was sufficient to keep francs around 4.56 cents in the local market most of the day, that price being about 3 points above the level prevailing Saturday. A price of 4.56 cents to the franc is considerably under the 4.65 cents quoted until a few days ago, but is well above the rate of 4.35 cents to which the franc may be lowered without violating the stabilization agreement. The foreign exchange market today was a good deal like Saturday's—a more or less inactive affair awaiting a cue from Paris as to a more definite gold policy. So far as could be learned, the Bank of France continued to refuse to sell gold except in fantastic quantities which were too immense for anyone to pay for.

Coppering.

Wall Street houses with foreign connections and which do most of the securities business for Wall Street's client in other countries, reported gains as high as 50 per cent over the normal business for foreign accounts, both from London and the Continent. Most of the dealings, they reported, were on the buying side. That would indicate that the bait held out for French money to return home has not yet been seen, or if so it has caught no fish. It isn't likely to catch any so long as wars and politics remain on the European horizon, and so long as our outlook for an inflationary boom in stocks is so alluring. In any event, the banks say no French money has yet been taken home. They do not expect any will move until at least it is known how the French Parliament will act on the Blum proposals and until a little time has been had for digestion of the new fiscal policy of the French Socialist government. The present tendency seems to be to copper the bets of M. Blum and Mr. Morgenthau.

Food and Grocery Bill 10 Billion Last Year

New York, March 8 (AP).—The Nation's housewives had a food and grocery bill of more than $10,000,000,000 in 1936, or 7.5 per cent over 1935, the annual survey of Progressive Grocer disclosed today.

Retail Advertising Makes Record Gain

Chicago, March 8.—Retail advertising in 77 major cities for this year through February 27, was 7.2 per cent ahead of the corresponding period of last year, according to Advertising Age.

In the period reported, newspapers in the measured cities carried a total of 146,943,885 lines of retail display against 137,107,806 lines in the like period of 1936, a gain of 9,836,079 lines, the largest cumulative gain shown at the end of any weekly period this year.

General Motors Sales Drop in February

New York, March 8 (AP).—General Motors Corporation reported today domestic and foreign sales of cars to dealers totaled 74,567 units in February compared with 103,668 in January and 144,874 in February, 1936.

The sharp decrease was attributed to the strike tie-up, recently terminated. Domestic retail sales totaled 51,600 against 92,998 in January, and 96,134 a year ago.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, March 8 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.)—Strong wool prices in Australian wool market contributed a cheering note in the wool market today despite several disquieting local conditions.

Mills for several weeks have bought little streasy shorn domestic wool and have as yet shown no sign of materially increasing their purchases in the near future. Uncertainty over the new demand outlook was heightened by the current labor situation in the wool textile industry.

Spot supplies of domestic wool were small and held mostly by concerns willing to wait for their asking prices, or at most make only limited concessions.

Local Bankers To Debate With Virginia Group

Subject Will Be Control of Power Sources by the Government.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Young banker-orators of Washington and Richmond, Va., will debate March 13, in the latter city, on the subject, "Resolved, That the Government should develop and control the chief source of hydro-electric power." The debating team of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, will argue the negative side of this question with the team of Richmond chapter of the institute.

Paul J. Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co., president of the local chapter, announced yesterday that its team will include Thomas Cronin, of the Munsey Trust Co., and William Russ, of the City Bank, with L. Harry Ryder, National Metropolitan Bank, as alternate.

Dr. Elmer Louis Kayser, of George Washington University, who is instructor of Washington Chapter's class in public speaking, has been coach for the local team, and a large delegation of chapter members is expected to accompany it to Richmond. The committee in charge of arrangements is headed by A. Stanley Wolfe, of Riggs National Bank, chairman; and composed of Thomas Cronin, vice chairman; Theodore Bogley, of Munsey Trust Co., and Fred Schreiner, First National Bank of Alexandria, Va.

Fleming to Speak.

President Robert V. Fleming, of Riggs National Bank, and immediate past president of the American Bankers Association, will be a speaker at the Southeastern Regional Conference of the association at Atlanta, Ga., during its sessions March 25 and 26. Banks' public relations policies will be discussed by Mr. Fleming. President Tom K. Smith, of the national organization, has chosen for his subject, "Why Bankers Should Counsel Together." He will also speak on "Utilization of Research by the American Bankers Association" during the sessions which will be devoted to consideration of bank management problems, banking research and other matters. The speaking program will also deal with the subjects of personal loan departments, bank investments, Federal Housing Administration mortgages, chartering of banks and prevention of bank crimes.

Housing Loans Increase.

A considerable increase in demand for loans under Title 1 of the national housing act is reported locally. Money secured through these loans is used for constructional alterations and repairs. Both bankers and real estate men believe the increased demand for these loans indicate a busy spring in the field of building repair. Assistance which the banks have given this class of loans has had considerable to do with the upturn in business.

Equitable Life Gains.

Equitable Life Insurance Co. of the District of Columbia reports 1936 as one of the best years in its history. On December 31, 1936, it had insurance in force totaling $86,249,000, an advance of $10,694,709. The company's total assets amounted to $12,378,062, also showing a gain, while surplus, including capital stock, aggregated $1,263,691 at the close of the year, likewise an increase of $156,545.

Sales and Collections.

Steady improvement of net sales and collections in the manufacturing field is announced in the joint report of the National Association of Credit Men and the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. January was marked by a progression of gains in sales and there were higher rates of collection recorded for each month last year in comparison with those of the preceding one.

Banking Notes.

Court Enjoins Sale Of Baltimore Stock

The Securities and Exchange Commission announced yesterday that Associated Pharmacists of Baltimore, Inc., and three individuals were enjoined by the District Court for the District of Maryland from further dealings in the stock of this corporation in violation of the securities act of 1933. The individual defendants were Elmer S. Lambdin, president of the company, Bradford T. Bechtol and Louis B. Robinson, salesman.

The commission contended that the defendants falsely represented the corporation was operating at a profit, when in fact it had operated at an increasing deficit; that there was to be a semiannual dividend of 6 per cent, when in truth the corporation had no earnings nor was there any reason to anticipate such earnings.

Foreign Exchange.

By the Associated Press.

A brisk rally in the French franc in foreign exchange dealings yesterday followed the purchase of gold in the open market at Paris by the Bank of France.

Exchange traders said the rate was changed later to the equivalent of around 4.56 cents to the franc and that the French stabilization fund had prevented the franc from moving higher.

In New York the franc was up ⅛ of a cent to $4.88, unchanged from the rate at which the dollar closed earlier in London.

Dust Storms, War Alarms, Advance Wheat

Prices Close With General Gains After Early Declines.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 8.—Reversing an earlier downward trend, wheat prices today scored general late gains, responsive increasingly to dust storm complaints from domestic crop territory Southwest and West. Moreover, some purchasing of wheat was attributed to news that a British vessel had been fired on by a battleship off the northern coast of Spain.

Race Services Here Continue Despite Raids

Garnett Threatens to Bar 'Telecast;' Prisoners Plead Not Guilty.

the raiders said. "The courts won't give us papers unless we have made a play."

Garnett, in a statement to the press yesterday afternoon, admitted that the Teleflash Co., a subsidiary of Nationwide News, had complained to him that Dietz's Telecast, Inc., was relaying Nationwide's track news from Baltimore and reselling it in Washington. Garnett said that his investigation followed Teleflash's complaint against Dietz.

The two companies have been at war in Washington for customers for a period of about a year. Dietz had 90 customers, while Teleflash could get only 16.

Pledge From "Teleflash."

Garnett was asked if he planned to raid Teleflash, which runs a news service similar to Telecast. He said he had received no information that Teleflash was selling to bookmakers. He said that he had received a pledge from the publisher of a racing paper, a subsidiary of Nationwide, that Nationwide would cease all activities of an illicit nature in Washington, and that he had no reason to believe the publisher had broken his pledge.

Attorney O'Connell said Dietz's business was "as legal as a church." He advised his clients to keep right on broadcasting and they did. Their offices on the seventh floor of the Albee Building were open to visitors.

O'Connell said he "would like nothing better than a complete investigation of Nationwide News, which has a monopoly on all racetrack news in the country, with the exception of Dietz's little business here in Washington. O'Connell said he would submit to the court, when, and if his clients are brought to trial, the "proposition that if Dietz's service is illegal, all are illegal. If the others are lawful, then Dietz's is lawful."

Got News From Baltimore.

It was learned authoritatively yesterday that Dietz has been obtaining his track news from a subscriber in Baltimore, who was a regular customer of Nationwide. This subscriber then relayed the news to Dietz in the Albee Building, whereupon Dietz flashed it out over his Telecast system.

The Nationwide News, according to Garnett, regarded Dietz's method of gaining information as unethical. They were unable to stop him because every time they located the person who was relaying to him, Dietz would shift informants and get someone else to relay the news to him. Often Dietz was said to have bought his news from Richmond, Alexandria, Charleston, and other nearby cities, when he was unable to get it in Baltimore.

Garnett indicated that the 13 men arrested may be held for the grand jury sometime during the next two weeks. Garnett stated yesterday that he did not have warrants when his agents raided Telecast headquarters Saturday and that warrants had not yet been sworn.

Most Curb Stocks Close With Loss

New York, March 8 (AP).—Comparatively sharp losses were registered in the curb market today as the majority of shares finished at about their lows of the session. Offerings mounted as sentiment favored lower prices on the "big board." Most of the list was caught in the downward movement, although a few oils held their ground, several even edging higher.

Setback ranged from fractions to 4 points or so. Tobacco and Allied stock reacted 4 to 62. Royal Typewriter lowered 3 to 96¼ and identical reverses were suffered by Pittsburgh Plate Glass at 142 and Aluminum Co. of America at 161. Pan American Airways closed at 69, off 1¾, and Montgomery Ward "A" at 149½, off 1½.

Of the comparatively few gainers Ohio Brass "B" up 2 at 66 and Atlantic & Pacific up 1¼ at 111¼ were impressive. Transactions totaled 690,000 shares compared with 670,000 shares last Friday.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 8.—Gilt-edged securities were heavy in today's stock market and Paris speculative favorites sold lower. Prices were quite mixed in other sections, cotton shares, lead, zinc and silver issues advancing and the rubber and transatlantic groups also moving higher. Home rails and oils reacted and sold lower while European bonds held steady.

Paris.—Prices were firm in the bourse today, rentes closing 60 to 120 centimes higher. Bank shares were strong. Bank of France moved up 490 francs up and Bank of Paris gaining 96 francs. Royal Dutch lost 63 francs and the international group was mixed.

Liverpool.—Wheat futures declined 1¼ to 1½d on the sharp decrease in the milling demand from the United Kingdom and the Continent. The stock afloat was large and Buenos Aires markets were easier. Cotton futures finished 4 to 7 points lower. The market declined under heavy liquidation of trading which centered in new crop positions. Stop orders were uncovered on the decline.

YOUTH!

for women of all ages— mothers and daughters—

Jacket Dresses

We lead swift lives . . . it's a world on the go . . . and every mother and her daughter are going places and doing things. The fashions for spring 1937 have captured this brisk, young pace. They're fashions that are impartially becoming to girls of eighteen and to their mothers who find that life begins at 40. Take these jacket dresses—they have a real zest for living—they're ready for scores of occasions—ready to have a good time and to look smart and becoming all around the clock. There's youth in the net-over-taffeta dress with print binding! There's youth in the trim black crepe with its edging of white! There's youth in the gay grosgrain bows which liven a sheer! And there's youth in the modest Hecht Co. prices, too!
